Dean Claims Nixon Involved

But Ignored Warnings Of 'A Cancer Growing'

... That Could Destroy President

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Dean III testified Monday that President Nixon was involved in the Watergate affair and ignored or failed to understand his repeated warnings about "a cancer growing on the presidency," that could destroy Nixon.

"When the facts come out," Dean said as he read a day-long, uninterrupted recitation of his own complicity. "I hope the President is forgiven."

Thus began the first testimony at the Senate Watergate hearings to point directly to presidential involvement in the cover-up of the Democratic Party break-in—the incident that touched off the explosive White House scandal.

Last Sept. 15, when seven men were indicted for the Watergate break-in, Dean said he received congratulations from the President that the case reached no higher than G. Gordon Liddy, the former legal counsel to the President's re-election and finance committees.

"I left the meeting with the impression that the President was well aware of what had been going on regarding the success of keeping the White House out of the Watergate scandal," Dean said. "I also had expressed to him my concern that I was not confident that the cover-up could be maintained indefinitely."

And after many meetings with the President about Watergate this year, Dean said, "it was quite clear that the cover-up as far as the White House was going to continue."

Dean, who was Nixon's official lawyer until he was fired April 30, said, however:

"It's my honest belief that while the President was involved, that he did not realize or appreciate at any time the implications of his involvement."

Others had pointed to Dean as a key member of the conspiracy to hide official involvement, as the conveyer of executive clemency offers, a raiser of funds to keep the Watergate defendants silent.

Dean's version, essentially, was that he did not know about the June 17 Watergate burglary in advance—that he was in the center of cover-up activities but did nothing without concurrence of H. R. Haldeman, the President's chief of staff and John D. Ehrlichman, his principal aide for domestic affairs.

His story was one of trying to get the White House to admit the truth and that he told the President:

"I thought it was time for surgery on the cancer itself and that all those involved must stand up and account for themselves and that the President himself get out in front on this matter."

But, he said, Nixon did not understand. Eventually, he said, Haldeman and Ehrlichman realized "I was not playing ball ... could present a serious problem to them," and he saw they were interested most in protecting themselves.

He said the two presidential aides evolved a plan to have John N. Mitchell take the blame and by mid-April "the theory that had been discussed ... was becoming the policy: 'if Mitchell takes the rap the public will have a high level person and be satisfied and the matter will end."

It took Dean nearly six hours to read his statement and questioning by the senators was put off until 9 a.m. CDT Tuesday, the 13th day of the hearings.

Dean said Nixon told him on Feb. 27 that his chief aides, H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, "were principals in the matter."

That was six weeks before the President announced "major developments in the case." Not until April 30 did Nixon announced the resignations of Haldeman and Ehrlichman and the firing of Dean.

The former White House lawyer said vigorous efforts were undertaken to hide White House ties to the break-in and named the chief participants as:

Haldeman, Ehrlichman, former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell; former Asst. Atty. Gen. Robert Mardian; campaign deputy director Jeb Stuart Magruder; and former White House aide Charles W. Colson.

He said he also briefed then Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst and Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry E. Petersen about G. Gordon Liddy's role in the wiretapping, almost three months before Liddy was indicted.

At San Clemente, Calif., Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon was being kept informed of Dean's testimony, but would have no comment this week.

Malone Residents Meet With Mayor

Citizens from the Malone area Monday met with Lincoln Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf and a "personnel misconduct" complaint about the actions of two Lincoln Park Rangers was filed following incidents over the weekend.

The approximately 30 to 35 adults and youths who met with Schwartzkopf were critical of police actions taken Saturday and Sunday night.

Extra Lincoln police "tactical force units" were sent into the Malone area after an alleged arson at the Lincoln Lumber Co. Saturday night and after officers allegedly encountered resistance when they tried to make arrests Sunday night in connection with the arson, according to police.

At the meeting in Schwartzkopf's office, complaints included:

— that parents of juveniles arrested were not notified of the fact until three or four hours later.

— that Lincoln police officers in the jail area were rude to visitors and parents of those arrested.

— that citizens in the Malone area had been subjected to unprovoked harassment during the last two weeks and particularly the last two days, and that police officers had beaten some individuals with billy clubs.

— that police contributed to a strained atmosphere by sending tactical force units (officers equipped with helmets and billy clubs) and police dogs into the Malone area.

The charge that police officers had beaten anyone over the weekend was denied by Lt. Roger LaPage, who was present at part of the meeting.

Proposals made by Schwartzkopf at the meeting included allowing black adults living in the Malone area to ride in police cruisers assigned there and that further meetings be held between city officials and residents of the Malone area.

Members of the police community relations department, representatives of the city and area residents were patroling the area Monday night in an effort to avert further disruptions.

The personnel misconduct complaint, according to City Atty Dick Wood, alleges that two youths, Will Nix, 18, and Glenn Payne, 18, were hit with blackjacks by two Park Rangers Saturday at Antelope Pool during an altercation there.

The complaint charges Rangers Clarence Cooper and Richard Baird. The complaint differs from police accounts of the incident, which state that Cooper was assaulted when he attempted to eject a youth from the pool and that Baird was assulated when he arrived to provide assistance.

According to police reports, the group which had gathered fled when Baird fired a shot into the ceiling of the bathhouse. Those filing the complaint said that the bullet ricocheted.

The complaint will be investigated by the Lincoln Police Department's Internal Affairs Office, according to Wood.

Six juveniles were referred to Lancaster Juvenile Court Tuesday and four persons were charged in Lancaster County Court in connection with the incidents Sunday night.

Those arraigned in county court and the charges against them are: Robert Fisher, 21, 835 No. 26th, two felony counts of assaulting a law enforcement officer; William Nix, 18, of 1535 No. 28th, one felony count of assaulting a park ranger; Maurice Scott, 17, one felony count of first degree arson; and Ronald Payne, 24, one felony count of assaulting a law enforcement officer.

Bonds set were $2,000 for Fisher, $500 for Nix, $2,000 for Scott and $1,000 for Payne. A preliminary hearing date was set for July 13 in all four cases.

House Votes End To U.S. Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House all but completed Monday a cutoff by Congress of all funds for the U.S. bombing in Cambodia.

It shouted approval of the Senate-passed cutoff after dramatically rejecting on a tie vote of 204 to 204 a proposal to delay the cutoff until Sept. 1.

President Nixon will have ten days after he receives the bill containing the cutoff to either halt the bombing or veto the measure.

At the California White House, spokesman Gerald L. Warren noted the administration had strongly opposed the legislation but said he would "withhold comment on what the President may do."

It first must go back to the Senate for final approval and then go through a formal printing procedure that takes one or two days before it goes to the President.

Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield said he doubted Nixon would veto the $3.4 billion second supplemental money bill to which the cutoff was attached—but vowed that if the bill is vetoed the money will not be reapproved by the Senate.

The House approved the Senate's Eagleton amendment prohibiting use of any money the Pentagon has for "combat activities in, over or from off the shores of Cambodia or in or over Laos."

Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., author of the bombing cutoff originally approved by the Senate 63 to 19, said President Nixon would "throw this nation into a constitutional impasse if he continued the bombing."

"The House has reflected the will of the American people in language that cannot be ignored," Eagleton said.

But supporters of the bombing policy, including House Republican Leader Gerald R. Ford, appealed for at least 60 more days to let the President try to force a final ceasefire in Cambodia with the bombing.

Ford said "highly classified" negotiations now under way are aimed at seating a stable government in Cambodia and said this would bring a cease-fire.

"It is worth the gamble," Ford said. "We should give the President 60 more days to conclude a final settlement in Indochina."

But the amendment by House Appropriations Chairman George H. Mahon, D-Tex., to delay the bombing cutoff until Sept. 1 was rejected by the 204 to 204 tie.

The new House electronic voting board registered 205 to 204 approval of the Sept. 1 delay when the time ran out. But Rep. Gunn McKay, D-Utah, withdrew his yes vote and threw the issue into the losing tie.

The vote cut off all funds in the supplemental money bill for the fiscal year ending June 30, and all prior funds ever approved by Congress, for the bombing.

Bombing opponents in both the House and Senate served notice they will try to attach the same or even stiffer Indochina war bans to all new funding bills for the military.

They said this will start Tuesday when the House takes up a stop-gap continuing resolution to authorize the Department of Defense and other federal agencies to continue spending until their regular appropriation bills pass Congress.

State Congressmen Disagree On Issue

During Monday's House vote on an amendment that would have postponed for 60 days the cutoff date for U.S. bombing funds in Cambodia, Nebraska representatives John Y. McCollister and David Martin, both Republicans, voted in favor of the amendment. Nebraska Congressman Charles Thone, also a Repulbican, voted against the amendment.

Varner Optimistic . . .

SUN Funding Outlook Good

By MILAN WALL
Star Staff Writer

In the most positive report to date, University of Nebraska President D. B. Varner said Monday he is now "quite optimistic" that the State University of Nebraska (SUN) project will be funded at a substantial level during the 1974 fiscal year.

"The chances are very good — more than even — it will be funded essentially as planned," Varner told the Nebraska Educational Television Commission.

And the budget planned, for a start in the fall, totals $3.1 million during the fiscal year that ends June 30 of 1974.

Although Varner cautioned the commission that no funds had been committed yet, he said he believes plans have "moved at least as well as I could hope."

The SUN project, which proposes to take to people in their homes college-level courses in a multimedia approach, has been developed during the past several months with a $500,000 research and development grant from the federal government.

Those funds were spent to develop pilot programs and a process for transmitting college courses via television, newspaper, video and audio cassettes and other modern communications media.

Varner told the commission he "may come back in August and say that this was a pleasant dream," but he said he believes it has captured the imagination of enough people to make its success likely.

"It has caught national attention," he said. "It is a national-scope project."

Much of the encouragement, said Varner, was the result of two successful presentations within the past two months.

One, early in May, was made in Washington to officials of government divisions such as the National Institute of Education and the National Center for Educational Technology.

The second was at a meeting a week ago in New York, where representatives of 10 major foundations saw the SUN preview demonstration.

"When we concluded, they applauded," Varner said of the foundation officials, who represented Ford, Carnegie, Mellon, Esso, Rockefeller and five other such foundations.

A similar reception was granted SUN in Washington, he said. "They were more enthused than we expected they might be."

Varner said the New York meeting was arranged by Samuel B. Gould, former chancellor of the State University of New York and chairman of the Carnegie-funded Commission on Non-Traditional Study, which released its study just this month.

Gould, termed by Varner the "most informed man in the country on non-traditional education," has said SUN is the "most advanced and complete approach anywhere in the country," the NU president reported.

Varner said he has suggested that several of the foundations might join together to fund as much as one-third to one-half of SUN's budget.

Varner also said that famed historian Henry Steele Commager had agreed to spearhead a consulting effort to outline two possible SUN courses for funding by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Outlines for SUN courses in general humanities and the American Revolution have been submitted to the Endowment, said Varner.

The NU president said he expects it might take several months to work out details for foundation funding, if the foundations decide to help support SUN.

But he said National Institute of Education word may come as early as August, permitting a start about Sept. 1 if that word is positive.

That would mean only partial-year operations, he said, and thus the 1974 budget was trimmed back from $4 million to the $3.1 million envisioned now.

An immediate problem, said Varner, is maintaining a core staff at SUN until the federal government acts, and he said an NIE staff meeting in Washington Friday should shed light on how that would be done.

Varner asked the commission, and got approval, for a request to permit State ETV General Manager Jack McBride to continue as SUN director for another 90 days to cover the interim period.

Varner said in the past he's "Been afraid to be optimistic for a project as far-reaching and expensive."

But he said with SUN, "this state has made a mighty impression on some important people in this country," and he said he is more confident than ever that it can become a national model for higher education away from the traditional campus setting.

Beatrice Floodplain Court Test Likely

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A long-standing feud between Beatrice residents and the Nebraska Natural Resources Commission over floodplain zoning is threatening to boil over into a courtroom battle over land use.

Vern Saathoff, chairman of Concerned Citizens of Beatrice, confirmed Monday that his group has retained two attorneys to challenge the 1967 Floodplain Zoning Act's constitutionality.

An attorney for the commission conceded Monday that the act is subject to some question but added that he has little doubt about the law's consitutional basis.

The basic contention of the Concerned Citizens is that between 500 and 800 property-owners within the boundaries of the 4-mile flood zone will experience a significant depreciation in the value of $8 million worth of property along the Big Blue River due to the floodplain designation.

And that, Saathoff maintained, amounts to confiscation of property without compensation.

But no one is willing to estimate just how much it will cost property-owners. The city assessor, city attorney and city council have decided to stay out of the legal arena, since Saathoff said the federal government is witholding a grant for a sewer system due to the lack of an approved floodplain zone.

Predictably, commission officials see the issue differently.

At the last commission meeting, the Beatrice floodplain zone was adopted after months of pressure from Beatrice residents, including the mayor, the city council, the Chamber of Commerce and an estimated 2,000 petition signatures, to delay it.

Al Mathews, the commission's floodplain administrator, said there is no proof that floodplain regulations decrease property values.

Actually, he said, "It's the flood hazard that decreases property values.

"People don't want to pay as much when they know there is a flood hazard."

Under the floodplain zoning law, Beatrice has one year to adopt floodplain regulations in agreement with the state's; if not, the state takes over enforcement of the law.

The zoning requirements require all new construction within the zone to meet engineering requirements capable of withstanding the Big Blue's "100-year flood," which is the highest water level expected on the river in 100 years.

Existing structures are granted an exemption under the grandfather clause contained in the law. But once existing structures are destroyed more than 50% by water or fire, repair is prohibited unless the structure is brought up to minimum zoning rules on construction.

Under a federal Housing and Urban Development program, the property-owners would be eligible for a low-cost insurance program, Mathews said.

"That's a pretty good package," Mathews said.

With the ideal conditions, meaning all construction in floodplain zone complied with the adopted regulations, property damage would be zero, Mathews said.

But since there are existing structures in the watersheds which have already adopted the floodplain zoning (the Papio and Salt Creek watersheds), Mathews said it will take "awhile" for the benefits of floodplain zoning to become apparent.

"We're lucky there has been no large-scale flooding recently," Mathews said.

Saathoff and the Concerned Citizens of Beatrice have countered that the area does have adequate floodplain regulation.

"We're not against zoning and conservation," Saathoff said. "We're questioning their right to devalue land without compensation on the basis of a Corps of Engineers study filled with errors."

"Beatrice does have flood zone regulation that restricts growth in certain areas without first building up the ground. It's about one-third the size of the one proposed by the commission."

The difference between the two zones is the magnitude of the 100-year floods each used in drawing up the plans.

Floods of roughly 30,000 cubic feet per second are the greatest which have been recorded on the Big Blue at Beatrice. That is what the city relied on in drawing up its own flood zone.

But Mathews noted that the 30,000 cubic feet per second flood has been recorded five or six times and thus in reality is the 20-year flood.

"We would expect the 100-year flood would be a lot bigger, probably 89,000 cubic feet per second," Mathews said. "That would be enough to wash away all of Beatrice."

Yet, the Concerned Citizens of Beatrice are betting that such a flood will never occur.

Dean Says Nixon In On Coverup Up To 8 Months

(c) New York Times News Summary

Washington — John W. Dean III, asserting that President Nixon had failed to heed a warning that the Watergate case was "a cancer growing on the presidency," told the Senate Watergate Committee that the President had taken part in the Watergate cover-up for as long as eight months.

Petersen Passed Information

Washington — Henry I. Petersen, while head of the Justice Department's criminal investigation of the Watergate case, passed information on grand jury testimony to the White House and arranged for high White House aides to be questioned out of the presence of the grand jurors, Dean told the Senate Watergate Committee.

Three More Names Implicated

Washington — At least three present or former White House staff members, in addition to those long linked to the Watergate scandal, were implicated in the Watergate case by the testimony of John W. Dean III. Dean charged that, to varying degrees, Ronald L. Ziegler, the White House press secretary; Richard A. Moore, a special counsel to the President, and Wallace H. Johnson Jr., a former congressional liaison, took part in the cover-up.

Dean Reports Attempts To Obstruct

Washington — John W. Dean III also told the Watergate Committee that President Nixon and his top aides, expressing fear of the "uncontrollable, if not hostile, forum" of the United States Senate, repeatedly attempted to obstruct and delay the proposed Senate Watergate investigation early this year.

House Votes To End Bombing Funds

Washington — The House, in its strongest antiwar action to date, voted to cut off all funds for United States bombing in Cambodia.

Summit Ends With Communique

Washington — Leonid I. Brezhnev's visit to the United States ended with the joint Soviet-American communique extolling his talks with President Nixon as a "further milestone" toward a major improvement in relations, but indicating that in some areas, like the Middle East, differences remained.

Assistance Ruled Unconstitutional

Washington — The United States Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional four attempts by Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and the New York Legislature to provide financial assistance to private schools, mainly those of the Roman Catholic Church.

Price Rollbacks Reported

Washington — The government reported its first price rollbacks under President Nixon's June 13 freeze. The Cost of Living Council said that 1,106 filling stations were found last week to be overcharging for gasoline, by an average of two cents a gallon, and had agreed to reduce their prices.

3-Way 'Supersummit' Hinted

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon and Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev pledged in a summit-ending communique Monday to press for rapid settlement of issues that have divided Europe along fading cold war lines for nearly three decades.

The 3,400-word document issued as Brezhnev left the United States raised the possibility of a supersummit of American, Soviet and European leaders — perhaps within a year — to conclude a major East-West settlement.

The communique also contained Nixon-Brezhnev promises to step up work on permanent nuclear arms limitations, to encourage peace in Cambodia and to expand U.S.-Soviet trade.

Nixon said his week of talks with the general secretary of the Soviet Communist party held the promise of "peace for all the people of the world." Brezhnev agreed, saying their sessions meant "political detente is being backed up by military detente."

Presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger also called the summit a success. At a news conference in a circus tent set up a mile from the Western White House for newsmen, Kissinger said extensive advance preparations insured its success.

"I really can't tell you of anything we hoped to accomplish that we didn't," Kissinger said.

AP

Richard M. Nixon

AP

Leonid I. Brezhnev

EUROPE: The leaders promised to make efforts to bring the European security conference opening July 3 "to a successful conclusion at the earliest possible time." This was followed by the hint of a supersummit among U.S., Soviet and European leaders: "Both sides proceed from the assumption that progress in the work of the conference can produce possibilities for completing it at the highest level."

Among other things, a conference agreement presumably would ratify the postwar division of Germany, settling an issue that has been a focal point of East-West tensions for decades.

The communique announced an Oct. 30 start of talks in Vienna on mutual balanced force reductions in Europe and said the leaders "attach great importance to the negotiations . . ."

The documents used the words "mutual reduction of forces" rather than the previously used phrase "mutual balanced force reductions."

Asked about this, Kissinger said there was no significance in the difference in wording and that "the future of force reductions in Europe will not be determined by an adjective."

ARMS LIMITATIONS: The leaders stressed the importance of reducing the burden of armaments and on limiting the offensive nuclear arsenals.

"The prospects for reaching a permanent agreement on more complete measures limiting strategic offensive armaments are favorable," the document said.

INDOCHINA: Nixon and Brezhnev hailed the agreement to end the Vietnam war and emphasized that it must be strictly implemented.

"They further stress the need to bring an early end to the military conflict in Cambodia," the communique said, adding that the leaders also reaffirmed their position "that the political futures of Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia should be left to the respective peoples to determine, free from outside interference."

MIDDLE EAST: Nixon and Brezhnev agreed to "exert their efforts to promote the quickest possible settlement" in the Middle East. The communique indicated that the two leaders still have differences on the issue, but it said an early settlement "should be in accordance with the interests of all states in the area, be consistent with their independence and sovereignty and should take into due account the legitimate interests of the Palestinian people."

TRADE: The two leaders said their nations should aim for a total of $2 billion to $3 billion of trade during the next three years. Kissinger said this would be an increase of about 50 per cent over present levels.

Nixon, Whitlam To Meet

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President Nixon and Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam will meet on July 30, the White House announced Monday.

The brief announcement said the two leaders "will review matters of common concern to the United States and Australia as partners in the ANZUS alliance."

The announcement did not specify where the meetings will be held. They could be conducted at the White House or at the Camp David presidential retreat or at Nixon's residences in California and Florida.

A White House spokesman said Whitlam's visit to the United States will be sandwiched between stops in Mexico and Canada.

Broiler Chicken Guides To Ease?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Admitting worry over developing food shortages, President Nixon's economic advisers raised the possibility Monday that the price freeze on some food, notably broiler chickens, may have to be eased.

But any food rationing within the next year is "extremely unlikely," Herbert Stein, chairman of Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers told newsmen.

On gasoline prices, the Cost of Living Council said that 1,106 service stations have rolled back gasoline prices as a result of government checks into consumer complaints that they were in violation of the price freeze.

The council said that 741 independent and 365 company-owned stations were found to be charging gasoline prices above the legal ceiling. The overcharge averaged two cents a gallon.

According to the council, all the stations readily agreed to rollback prices when contacted.

Stein and the two other council members, Gary Seevers and Marina Whitman, said that the high cost of feed grains is putting the squeeze on broiler and other food producers.

Seevers said there is solid evidence that the freeze is causing limited production in some areas, noting what he called "horror stories" of producers killing chickens because raising them for the market would be too expensive.

At present, he said, the administration is sitting tight so that it can find out how serious the situation is.

In addition to chicken, the administration is also worried about shortages of eggs, tomatoes and other products.

Stein also left open the possibility that when export controls on feed grains become effective, even those contracts in effect prior to the freeze may be affected. Previously, the administration had left the impression that only new contracts to ship grain overseas would be subject to controls after June 13, the date of the freeze.

Stein said the administration still hopes to have by mid-July an official announcement on what the Phase 4 system of mandatory wage-price controls will be.

Circumcision Need Questioned

World News

(c) Chicago Daily News

New York — So many physicians are criticizing the practice of circumcision that insurance carriers are soliciting medical opinion on whether it should any longer be covered as a surgical procedure, it was revealed Monday.

Dr. Robert Burger, an urologist at Texas Childrens Hopital, Houston, said it has become a "hot issue" but that he favors continuing the procedure in newborn as a measure of cleanliness. Circumcision prevents cancer of the penis and protects the female against cancer of the cervix, he said.

"This malignant disease is shown to have an incidence of 2.2 per 100,000 married Jewish women but as high as 44 per 100,000 non-Jewish women married to uncircumcised males," Burger told the American Medical Assn. convention.

Opponents of circumcision believe it should be limited to only those with a "problem foreskin."

Some have decried circumcision, said Burger, because of a "reported diminution in glandular sensitivity."

Circumcision, usually done during the hospital stay is not expensive compared to a delayed childhood or adult procedure, Burger pointed out.

However, it should not be referred to as "routine or simple" and should be performed only by a well-trained and experienced physician, after a complete physical examination. It should be withheld when the infant has a birth defect, or blood abnormality or is premature.

Under proper circumstances, the complication rate of circumcision is low. A New York city study showed one death in 500,000 cases, the physician said, and the death occurred after circumcision done at home by a non-certified mohel (religious lay circumciser).

IN PERSPECTIVE

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

A news story the other day spoke of the prospects of a food shortage in this nation by 1980 but it pointed out that this did not mean widespread starvation. The significance of that is that such a thing would not even have needed to be pointed out until very recently.

It has been only in the past six months to a year that the possibility of a sufficient shortage to bring on starvation would even have occurred to anyone. We do not believe there will be starvation, other than what might occur for reason of simple poverty, but only because of our basic faith in the nation and its institutions.

At the moment, conditions do not lend themselves to much confidence but you have to believe that when the chips are down, the right answers will be found. Agriculture, in our view, is heading into some rough times.

There are those who believe the new farm program and other things will bring prosperity in agriculture and an ample food supply. They may be right and we hope they are but a great many things are not working in that direction.

Many grain farmers this year are facing a multiplicity of problems. Elevators that might buy the grain are already loaded, unable to find the transportation to move out the products from last year's harvest. While elevators may agree to buy grain, the farmer will receive no payment for it until the elevator has been able to free capital funds by disposing of its current stock.

The fuel shortage is hitting home in many parts of the nation and could hit hard here in Nebraska. Where adequate fuel might be available to run the harvesting equipment, it can come at premium prices, further increasing to farmers the cost of doing business.

Then there is the matter of the price freeze, a situation adding uncertainty to all aspects of agriculture. Whatever is said about the absence of a freeze on the price paid to farmers, such a freeze exists as a practical matter because it applies at all levels beyond the price received by farmers.

If you freeze the price at the wholesale and retail level, then you have frozen it at the farm level. There is no way for the farmer to get a price at which the wholesaler and retailer cannot make a profit because these processors and distributors are not going to operate at a loss.

Then, there is the matter of the weather. From a weather point of view, it may turn out to be a good year or a bad year. If nature cooperates, it will be a big assistance; but if it does not, then further woe will be heaped upon the farmer's head.

If, on top of all this, imports are stepped up and exports held down to lower prices in the grocery store, conditions will become still more critical.

Congress talks about a farm program that will encourage agricultural production and peg the price of farm products to realistic levels but the ultimate form of that program and its merits remains to be seen. And the program must, somehow, be coordinated with any price freeze plan that might be in effect.

Overall, agriculture is being hurt by the economy as a whole and the growing and diversified federal government activity in that economy. The nation is taking unprecedented steps away from past principles of a free economy.

We have never really followed that principle to the degree that we talked about and seem to be departing more and more from it as time goes on. To the degree that it affects agriculture, it affects our very survival.

The New Permissiveness

Regents Choose Safest Route

Students at the University of Nebraska's Lincoln campus now have the opportunity to look better than the NU system's Board of Regents did this weekend in deciding against alcohol on campus proposals and expanding coed visitation hours.

No good reasons were given by the board majority in carrying through with their expected actions. Apparently the regents felt that it was politically safer to say "no" than to grant students the greater measures of freedom of choice that is due them.

Chancellor James Zumberge offered the proposals allowing possession of beer and liquor in campus living units and serving alcoholic beverages in four other Lincoln campus buildings on special occasions. After the board rejected the proposals, Zumberge asked students: "Will you, as some predict, 'throw a tantrum' because you didn't get your way? Or will you demonstrate . . . that you do possess the maturity of young adulthood by your ability to remain calm in the face of frustration by your patience in dealing with those who do not share your views, and by your trying to understand, without necessarily accepting, attitudes that are different from your own?"

Student leaders admitted they were disappointed and discouraged by the defeat of the liquor and coed visitation proposals, but promised that students would again seek their approval by the regents. Hopefully, at a later date, the regents will be able to stand up under the controversy that clouds the issue and decide to treat students who are adults as adults should be treated.

In the meantime, it would be wise for students to accept Zumberge's counsel and exhibit patience in the face of the penchant of some small-minded officials to adhere to rules that make life unnecessarily difficult for the people they govern.

Bus Ridership Up

The Lincoln Transporation System (LTS) board, which oversees operations of the city-owned bus line, has suggested hiring an inspector who would check buses for schedule conformance on a random basis. The purpose would be to assure that LTS buses are where they are supposed to be when they are supposed to be.

The LTS board at its last meeting also discussed implementing some form of long-range planning, which, as other city officials pointed out, will not only be usefull but necessary if future federal assistance is sought.

These actions are additional examples of the board's determination to maintain and expand LTS as a first class public transportation system.

Efforts thus far are partially reflected in ridership figures just published. The figures show a 43% increase in passengers during the months December through May over the same period the prior year. And a significant percentage of that increase has been attributed to the five new bus routes established last November: Trendwood and South, East Vine, West A and Gaslight Village, Arnold Heights and the Crosstown route.

The prediction by promoters of the city takeover that service improvements along with the new vehicles would result in greater ridership interest is being fulfilled. LTS has brought better bus service to more Lincolnites and if the board keeps aiming high, that situation should only improve.

There was one bit of distressing news in the passenger figures. While all other routes show a considerable increase over the previous year, the Mini Bus routes in May experienced a decline in passengers from May, 1972.

Hopefully the minibuses are experiencing only a temporary setback which will not give rise to talk about abandoning the unique and classy downtown operation.

To Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is chemical diabetes? I have been tested several times and blood tests have been normal. I do not use sweets and am 70 years old.—C.B.

There are different classifications of diabetes. Overt diabetes means there is no question of presence of the disease. Chemical (also called latent) diabetes means that a fasting blood sugar is normal, but a sugar tolerance test is not.

That is, a fasting blood sugar would be a test made a substantial time after you have last eaten. A sugar tolerance test is a series of tests, an hour apart, with the patient being given a measured amount of sugar.

Thus with the fasting test, you can conclude that the patient manages to use up enough sugar, given time. The sugar tolerance test will show whether he uses it up rapidly enough.

With a chemical or latent diabetes, the salient symptoms of diabetes do not appear—excessive thirst, frequent urination, loss of weight. However, I would suspect that your doctor at some time or other detected some sugar in your urine, making him rightly suspicious.

One must keep in mind that at your age blood sugar values may be a bit higher than what is considered normal for younger ones. A chemical diabetes can remain the same, or can get worse if you don't follow a suitable diet, or can improve if you cut out sweets and reduce weight.

Which will happen in your case remains to be seen; I would recommend a periodic blood sugar test, taken two hours after a meal, to keep track of the situation.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A man in a health food store bought a large amount of a product known as sea salt. I asked him what for, and he said if you have a water-retention problem, it keeps it away. I have been on a salt-free diet for several years, and if what this man said were true, why don't doctors recommend it instead of salt substitutes, since this product tastes like real salt?—Mrs. M.A.N.

Because sea salt IS real salt, and it WON'T prevent water retention. It will make it worse.

For the most part, I think the "health food" fads are harmless, and if you want to go in for them—well, it's your money and your choice.

But giving you the idea that "sea salt" is for you is distinctly NOT harmless. It's dangerous for you.

☆ ☆ ☆

Note to Mrs. C.R.: The easy way to find names of dermatologists (or other specialists in your area is to call the county medical society.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: You wrote that hands, knives, cutting boards, etc., should be thoroughly washed after handling raw pork and before coming in contact with other foods to prevent trichinosis. My question is how you know the trichinosis larvae are present, so you can take these measures? How can we recognize them?—N.S.D.

That's the point—you can't see them. You can't recognize them. You won't know they are there until afterward—when, or if, you get sick.

Since pork is the commonest source of trichinosis, just be careful with it. Wash hands or utensils that have come in contact with raw pork. Then cook pork thoroughly. Cooking destroyes the trichinosis organism.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Recently I was told I needed an operation to remove cataracts from my eyes. I'm 53. A health book I was reading mentioned exercises and referred to a certain school. I sent for literature and was told I could purchase the kit for $60 (or visit the school) and do eye exercises that would remove the cataracts non-surgically. I would appreciate any information on this.—Mrs. R.C.

There are no exercises that will remove cataracts, any more than there are any exercises that will remove freckles. Or warts. Or tumors. Or scars.

Since you can see well enough to read this "health book," you can see well enough so this "school" probably can kid you along for a few months. Meantime they'll have your $60.

Better save your money for the operation when you realize that cataracts don't go away by exercises. Or anything else except, at the appropriate time, surgery.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 15 and a diabetic. I was told by some people that: 1 — Diabetics do not grow in height after age 15; 2 — female diabetics have premature babies. If true, I would like to know why.—S.A.

First statement wrong. Not true.

Second: not true of all. Female diabetics, it is true, do not handle pregnancy as well as non-diabetics. Premature births and still births are frequent but with good medical supervision many births are normal.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

The Decision

Lincoln, Neb.

It's interesting to note the decision of the Lincoln School Board on how to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Cathy Angle this month. In light of the national emphasis on open meetings in Congress and Nebraska's open meetings law and the Watergate fiasco, one would think every public board would lean over backwards not to cause the citizens reason to become suspicious!

In rejecting the simple and logical solution of selecting the next in line of the May election candidates, one wonders who was the No. 4 person and why is the board avoiding appointing him since the public has already spoken.

It also seems strange for people to resent the reporting and editorials provided by our local papers and press when much of our citizenry regard them so highly and when so few examples of irresponsible reporting can be attributed to them. In fact, it seems to me that the press has to be commended more and more for responsible and in-depth reporting these days.

If I were a board member, I'd have to say: "Let's get on with our school board business. The public has already spent time and money making this decision. What are we resisting it for? Let's select the candidate next in line before we give the citizens reason to become apprehensive about our capabilities to make responsible and logical decisions."

Dees and Dums

Fremont, Neb.

Alas, the tweedle-dums are investigating the tweedle-dees. The investigation will not be complete unless the Tweedle Dees investigate the tweedle-dums, especially their activities over the past several years with respect to taxation, war and constitutional limits on the public debt. What's the need for placing a limit on the debt if, when it reaches that limit, it is extended again and again? What, then, is the constitutional limit? Why should 59 cents of every tax dollar be spent on the military complex?

According to my personal poll during the last election in this area, George McGovern should have been elected by a large majority, and since the Watergate investigation, I am convinced of that. The tweedle-dees also must have been convinced of that fact, since they employed nearly every trick under the sun with their $60 million to defeat him, including crime, sabotage and subversion.

Now they're suggesting the people be taxed to pay for elections, something I claim the people have been paying for over the years in the name of salaries or wages and expenses, the larger portion of which I would call subsidies or welfare, because no person can earn the wages paid most of our so-called representatives, let alone spend it. He can throw it away, but he can't spend it in spite of the inflationary prices.

One does not need to be a genius, nor a diploma-carrying graduate to do that. A person must be a genius who can muster an existence from a paycheck of $85 to $95 per month.

Volunteers Wanted

Lincoln, Neb.

The Lincoln Board of Education is to be highly commended for its unanimous approval of the reading disability program as presented by the Concerned Citizens Task Force and the Lincoln Public Schools administration.

This establishes the Orton Gillingham Program for children with reading disabilities. These are children with at least average intelligence who have great difficulty learning to read or spell by conventional methods. This reading disability knows no particular social, economic, or ethnic group.

One of the most important functions of the Board of Education is to adopt courses of study and to approve instructional materials for use in the schools, and to provide the pupil personnel services which support a sound instructional program.

The responsibility for execution of the Orton Gillingham Program goes directly to Dr. Prasch, superintendent of schools. For the benefit of the children, we hope and encourage the principals and Teachers, who are the most important ingredient for a successful program, to adopt a positive attitude with full cooperation and enthusiasm for this program in each school at each grade level.

The League of Women Voters supports the Lincoln Public School system's effort to equalize the educational opportunities of these children by offering this special program. The League's position is that the school program should be flexible and open to change in methods of teaching and in organizational structure. We further believe that the most important criterion in setting up an annual budget are the educational benefits of the school programs.

Many volunteers will be needed at each school to work in a one-to-one supportive role. It's not necessary that they always be mothers. Any male or female who has time to take the 12-hour volunteer training course, who has time to give a few hours a week at the local school, and who exhibits patience and love toward children may submit his or her name to the principal of the nearest school or to the League of Women Voters education chairman.

'Outlaw' Funds Contribute To Shaky World Economy

WASHINGTON — The administration's puzzlement over the dwindling value of the dollar prior to June 13 was understandable. The balance of trade and payments appeared to be improving and that usually signals the time when currency speculators — for want of a better term — begin to buy dollars, driving up their value. So why were the gnomes of Zurich selling dollars?

Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz told the House Ways and Means Committee June 4 he couldn't understand it. Since our prospects for limiting inflation were "better than most other countries," it seemed the rest of the world was out of step. Jack L. Bennett, deputy undersecretary of the treasury, said that "irrational factors" were responsible for the dollar's continued decline.

In announcing the reimposition of a freeze on prices, President Nixon did not mention the sinking dollar. But it was almost certainly on his mind. A continued flight from the dollar abroad, along with a bearish stock market and screaming inflation at home, were all signs that the American economic boom was wobbling badly.

During the first six months of this year, the dollar underwent an enormous de facto devaluation — ranging from 5.8% in terms of British currency to 18.2% in terms of Swiss franc. And that was on top of "official devaluations of 8.6% in August, 1971, and a further 10% last February in terms of gold.

The reason for the latest attack on the dollar, most analysts agree, was a pervasive lack of confidence in American currency. The holders of dollars abroad saw no end to inflation and, it was said, did not believe the Nixon administration had the clout or the will to meet the problem head-on. In desperation, the overseas holders of dollars bought gold — driving the price to a record peak of $127 an ounce on June 5.

The high price of gold is a further symptom of a general crisis of confidence. American officials have told the speculators over and over again that gold is being "demonetized" and has no financial value.

President Nixon has now moved against inflation and that should remove a major doubt in the minds of the owners of dollars abroad. But any greedy speculator worth his salt will still be wondering how far he can trust the American government. Will the freeze really damp down inflation? What will happen when the freeze ends in mid-August? Has the threat of a recession been removed?

Curiously enough, monetary officials should be hoping that the speculators do not put too much confidence in Phase IV. If they do, there will be a massive flight to the dollar and that could be almost as disruptive as the flight from the dollar that has been taking place for months.

There is no end in sight to the succession of monetary crises. An $80 billion pool of Eurodollars in Europe, made largely of "hot" money seeking a profit, can be moved quickly from commodity to commodity and from country to country, leaving governments to patch up their ravished economies as best they can. There is not likely to be any international monetary peace until somebody figures out a way to control these "outlaw" funds.

Nixon-Brezhnev Promises

WASHINGTON — The Nixon-Brezhnev agreements on the limitation of strategic offensive arms and the joint development of peaceful atomic energy promise a great deal more than they deliver, but at least they maintain the spirit of cooperation.

Even if there is less in these documents than meets the eye, they are letters of intent. They are saying that the two most powerful nations in the world believe they have more to gain by cooperating with one another than by fighting one another, and that even limited agreements in the fields of arms control, atomic energy development, trade and culture may eventually lead to a more dependable world order.

No world order can be established without getting rid of the mistrust that poisoned the relations between Washington and Moscow in the first generation after World War II, and this is the main thing that is going on now. They are building confidence rather than trading gas for wheat.

If you look at the Soviet Union's economic and political arrangements with the non-communist states over the last few years, it is easy to argue that Moscow had gained more than it has given. The present basis for negotiation rests on assumptions highly favorable to the U.S.S.R.

The Soviets have negotiated formal acceptance by the West of the wartime boundaries, which is a polite way of saying that the West has accepted the division of Germany, and the establishment of a Soviet sphere of influence in Eastern Europe, now occupied by Soviet troops.

Meanwhile, the Soviet Union is getting from her former cold war adversaries the grain and the modern technology her own system has not been able to provide. This still troubles a lot of people here who would have preferred to see the communists crippled by the consequences of their own failure and who ask, what do we get out of all this?

The short answer in the short run is, not much. Moscow wants credits now for the development of gas and other raw materials which will not be available for years to come. Her benefits are tangible and immediate, ours on the whole are intangible and remote, and yet there is something to be said for the administration's patient efforts to bring both the Soviet Union and China into closer contact with the changing and interdependent modern world.

If both sides come to believe that they do not have to live in fear of destruction by the other, it may be possible to get the arms race under control. It will be a very slow business, but the nations of the world are now spending over $220 billion a year on their military establishments, and they are not likely to find the resources to deal with their growing populations until they can make substantial reductions in their defense budgets.

The Nixon-Brezhnev communique on the limitation of strategic offensive arms deals more in principles than in specifics. It does little more than give the SALT II negotiators new instructions to get back to Geneva and try to come up with "a permanent agreement on more complete measures" to control strategic weapons.

This is about all they could do for the time being, for they are now negotiating the most complicated problem ever attempted by two sovereign nations, not merely to limit the numbers of nuclear weapons, but to agree on the quality of those weapons—on such things as multiple warheads on missiles, and the old problem of inspection and verification of whatever agreements are reached.

Both President Nixon and General Secretary Brezhnev are likely to be out of office long before the objectives of their agreements are reached, but they are keeping the process of negotiation going, and if as much progress is made in the next 27 years before the end of the century as was made in the last 27 years since the end of the second world war, these meetings may achieve the historic objectives claimed for them by the two leaders.

Even personal freedom, which seems to terrify the communists more than atomic weapons, is making a little slow progress as a result of these talks. The freedom of the Soviet Jews to emigrate to Israel has not been solved, but mainly as a result of pressure from here, Brezhnev has made some concessions and has tolerated American interference with his internal laws more than any American president would have tolerated similar interference from the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, Brezhnev has had a look at this vast continental country and a better understanding of its political and business leaders. Looking back 14 years, Nikita Khruschev came here and went away, not with any great agreements, but with a few doubts about his own anti-American prejudices. Relations between the two countries, helped no doubt by growing Sino-Soviet hostility, have been improving ever since.

The question is not whether these agreements have established an ideal or even sensible relationship between the two giants, but whether they have maintained the negotiating process and made things better than they were. After all, an isolated and frustrated Soviet Union with enough atomic weapons to blow up the world is not a very happy prospect. Even an unequal deal, if it builds confidence, is better than that.

Dean Describes Watergate Coverup Story

His beautiful bride, Maureen, sat behind Dean as he read in an even voice—his testimony carried live by the three commercial television networks.

He began by saying the Watergate affair "was an inevitable outgrowth of a climate of excessive concern over the political impact of demonstrators, excessive concern over leaks, an insatiable appetite for political intelligence, all coupled with a do-it-yourself White House staff, regardless of the law."

Dean said Haldeman and Ehrlichman directed the extensive cover-up activities, including efforts to sidetrack a congressional investigation, destroy evidence, tailor the testimony of principals and blame the Central Intelligence Agency for all that had happened.

At a meeting March 13, Dean said, Nixon told him that Colson had discussed an offer of executive clemency for E. Howard Hunt, another of the Watergate defendants.

Dean said he told Nixon about money demands being made by the Watergate defendants and that there was no money to pay.

"He asked me how much it would cost," Dean said. "I told him that I could only make an estimate, that it might be as high as a million dollars or more.

"He told me that that was no problem and he also looked over at Haldeman and repeated the same statement."

He said his talk with Nixon on Feb. 27 was the first he had with the President about Watergate since Sept. 15 the previous year.

"It was at this meeting that the President directed that I report directly to him regarding all Watergate matters," Dean testified. "He told me that this matter was taking too much time from Haldeman's and Ehrlichman's normal duties and he also told me that they were principals in the matter and I, therefore, could be more objective than they."

On April 16, Dean said he was summoned into the President's office and Nixon told Dean it might be a good idea if he submitted either a letter of resignation or a request for indefinite leave of absence.

Dean said the President gave him two letters for signature, saying "he would not do anything with them at this time but thought it would be good if he had them."

On April 17, Dean said, the President told him he had decided to request no resignations until after the grand jury took action.

Dean took issue with the President's March 21 statement that he had begun a new investigation into Watergate.

"The President commenced no investigation at all," Dean said. "Rather, the President, Haldeman and Ehrlichman commenced to protect themselves against the unraveling of the cover-up."

He said since April 19 he has had virtually no contact with anyone on the White House staff, except for a "stroking call" by the President on Easter Sunday to wish him happy Easter.

Dean said he felt all along that Nixon did not seem to understand the implications of the cover-up going on and "I did not know if he realized that he himself could be getting involved in an obstruction of justice situation by having promised clemency to Hunt."

On March 21, Dean said he talked with Nixon. "What I had hoped to do in this conversation was to have the President tell me that we had to end the matter—now," Dean said.

"I began by telling the President that there was a cancer growing on the presidency and that if the cancer was not removed that the President himself would be killed by it. I also told him that it was important that this cancer be removed immediately because it was growing more deadly every day."

Dean said he told Nixon the whole story at that meeting, about the January and February 1972 meetings with Magruder, Mitchell and Liddy where espionage plans were laid out "but that I did not know how the plan had finally been approved."

He said he decided then to tell the story but "my most difficult problem was how I could end this mess without wounding the President." Dean said he started the report, then heard that two newspapers were printing a story that he and Magruder had prior knowledge of the Watergate break-in.

"I considered the story libelous then, as I do today," Dean said. He contacted an attorney and said he also wanted to obtain a criminal lawyer.

On March 26, Dean said, he discussed the newspaper story with Haldeman and said he was prepared to sue for libel. "I told him that he knew that I had not known of the June 17th Watergate break-in in advance, that my knowledge of the entire matter ended with the second meeting in Mitchell's office," Dean said.

Two days later, Dean said he got the impression that Haldeman "was now in the process of uninvolving himself, but keeping others involved.

"This was a clear sign to me that Mr. Haldeman was not going to come forward and help end this problem, rather he was beginning to protect his flank."

That reaction and his earlier dealings with Ehrlichman, Dean said, convinced him not to give them the report he had written

LIFE BEGINS AT FORTY:

Bachelor Brother Is Reluctant And Indifferent Host

By ROBERT PETERSON

QUESTION: — "Shouldn't a retired couple expect basic hospitality when they drive 500 miles out of their way to visit a brother they haven't seen in 15 years? We phoned Ray's bachelor brother, John, saying we were coming and when to expect us. When we arrived he was in old clothes painting the garage and barely looked up. After we'd gotten out of the car he came over, shook hands with us indifferently, and said we could make up the two sofas in the living room to sleep on since the house had only two bedrooms — his and one full of junk. He also said he didn't have any food in the refrigerator, so if we wanted to eat we should pick up some groceries. He said he couldn't keep us more than two days as trout season was opening and he was going fishing. Then he went back to his painting. Our blood pressure soared and we got back in the car. Ray asked what we should do and I said we should leave. We did, but of course have felt miserable ever since. Were we wrong?"

ANSWER: — Few will blame you for leaving, but by doing so you lost the chance to probe this guy's psyche. It might have been interesting to swallow your pride, stick around, and try to discover what makes him act this way. People who live alone sometimes become ingrown and incapable of dealing with others in a socially acceptable manner. Generous souls try to be tolerant of the rudeness and indifference of boors and bachelor brothers. I think you should write John and apologize for driving off as you did. Tell him you want to keep in touch. But don't count on warming him up. He sounds like an independent cuss who wants and needs neither friends nor relatives.

QUESTION: — "There's a 67-year-old widow up the street who lost her husband two years ago. When she read in the papers about a retarded 14-year-old girl who had been abandoned by her parents, she offered her services as foster parent in caring for the child that no one wanted. She was assigned the child and the two of them have been very happy together. Now this woman is losing her sight and the girl is able to guide her on their daily walks. She has also been able to help with household chores. Isn't this a wonderful story in reciprocation?"

ANSWER: — It certainly is. Society often thinks of retarded people as being only burdensome, offering no benefits to those who care for them. As a consequence they are respected by society and must live out their years in state institutions. But actually many retarded people could be cared for in private homes where they might not only offer companionship but tangible assistance in household chores.

QUESTION: — "You usually paint a rosy picture of family relations in old age, but my sister has four children who treat her miserably. When they got married they came and took half her furniture. They never remember her birthday and seldom write. And they let her apply for welfare rather than chip in and send her a little money now and then. What do you say?"

ANSWER: — It takes all kinds. Now and then one runs into ungrateful, inconsiderate offspring. But the great majority of children feel a natural affection and concern for their parents and contribute much to the satisfaction of parents in retirement years.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — My grandfather rose before 6 a.m. to get to work. He spent 10 to 12 hours a day at his office. He enjoyed it.

"All in a day's work," he said nudging me in the ribs, "as the hunter said when the bear ate him."

Everybody looked forward to work as a means of getting enough money to quit working forever. Few attained this.

Here we are in the lazy days of summer. The 37-hour work week will soon be down to 30.

This worries a lot of people. (If you have nothing to worry about, worry on that one.) What to do with people who will soon do nothing.

It doesn't worry people who are working like crazy thinking of things for people to do. Thinking up things for leisure time is a $100 billion business.

This is hard to realize. When I was in knee pants, everybody grownup worked all the time.

"Man's work is from sun to sun, but a woman's work is never done," said grandma. "Drat these dishes!"

People doing nothing. Prices going up. "President Freezes Prices." That's the headlines. (However, the President didn't put wages or dividends in the refrigerator.)

Nixon spoke to a bunch of students. He told them he would hold down inflation.

But he added: "Putting it in a more positive way, the increase of food and other prices is not something to be looked upon as an enormous burden but as an opportunity."

An opportunity for what he did not say.

("Hasn't been a good President in the White House since Teddy Roosevelt," my grandfather said in the barber shop. What he said was muffled under hot towels.)

Japan is having problems with "reja taimu". (Leisure time — the idea is so new the Japanese have had to work with American words.)

Everybody is in a reja mudo (leisure mood).

"The Japanese meka (maker) is merciless. They use the trend as a gudo chansu (good chance). They started the summer sales campaign to sell mota boto (motor boats) by renaming them reja boto."

Japanese spend leisure time selling us Seiko watches and Yamaha motorbikes. Thus we can spend our leisure time (registered on the watch) breaking our necks (on motorcycles). This gives early retirement to many.

With nothing else to do, millions of people travel around the world. They come home exhausted.

The travel people — airlines and resorts — are happy about this way of using up leisure time.

"Travel has been the major beneficiary of the new leisure," says a business magazine, "and the best may be yet to come.

"Less than 30% of the population has ever flown. Only a little more than half the people have ever stayed in a hotel or motor inn. Only 45% take a vacation away from home each year."

☆ ☆ ☆

When I was passing leisure time swinging on a gate, people used their leisure time with spring housecleaning.

Grandma took up all the carpets. She hung them in the backyard. She beat them with a carpet beater. It was a wire thing with a handle — I don't suppose they make them anymore.

She beat them, and great clouds of dust flew out.

"Spring housecleaning wears me to a frazzle," she told my grandfather.

He said: "Well, we'll take a nice long two weeks vacation in July."

"Thank heaven for small favors," said grandma.

NCCC May Fight State Action

. . .Company Upset By Cancellation Of Contract

By DON BEMAN
United Press International

The Nebraska Consolidated Communications Corp. (NCCC) stands to lose the State of Nebraska as a customer July 1, but a firm official said there may be a fight.

"We're upset about this and we're not sure what our course of action will be right at the present," said Clifford E. Thompson, NCCC president.

"We are considering various alternatives to protecting our $1.25 million investment and some kind of legal action is among them," he added.

Cancellation

Earlier, the Exon administration served notice to NCCC that its contract for what represented the first phase in a statewide telecommunications network, which was scrapped earlier this year, was being cancelled as of July 1.

At the time the cancellation notice was announced on June 14, Gus Lieske, state administrative services director, said individual agencies could negotiate communications needs with any firm they wished.

Thompson, however, said it isn't working that way.

"These agencies are not getting the authority to come and talk to us," he said.

'Draw Away'

"We have talked to some of the major users of our service and we were told they would like to continue receiving our service and our price was right," Thompson said. "But when we go back with a contract, they draw away from us."

The state's involvement with NCCC has been the subject of concern on the part of the Legislature for the last year, primarily because of the state's being in continual debt to NCCC.

The state currently owes the firm about $136,772.

Thompson declined to go into any detail on the courses of action being considered in connection with the service cancellation, saying "We'd just like to get all the facts and get them straight."

Meeting Reported

Statehouse sources, meanwhile, reported Lieske met with Norman Otto, administrative assistant to Gov. J. J. Exon, last Thursday to discuss the whole communications situation.

The sources said out of the meeting came a directive to state agencies that they could contract communications services with any firm — as long as it was Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph (LT&T).

Otto, when confronted, said the meeting took place Wednesday and no such directive came out of it.

But on the other hand, he said:

"I don't think there's any other choice. If you want a telephone in Lincoln, where else do you go but LT&T."

Broader Service

NCCC, however, has been supplying the state with more than telephone service. Included were such things as radios and data processing lines, to name a few.

On that point, Thompson said the service has been more than just adequate and his firm should have a chance to continue providing it.

"The system has been operating superbly — not just good but superbly," he said.

Total Cost

Lieske said the key to the situation as discussed with Otto is total cost, noting NCCC offered a $13,000 a month tag to continue serving the state while LT&T put a $10,640 tag on their services.

Lieske also said the state looked not only at a total package, but a combination of NCCC-LT&T services as well.

As to what would have happened to NCCC come in with a lower figure, the director said it would have been accepted.

"I predict that had been lower, we would have gone with them," Lieske said.

Stick With Figure

But for the time being, he said its time to quit jockeying around on prices and stick with one figure or another.

"At this point, we can't continue leaving this thing open," he said.

Thompson, however, wanted to know about the bidding process.

Lieske said officially there was none. He said LT&T is a common carrier and its rates are not that negotiable because of government regulation. He added that service from LT&T is subject to immediate cancellation.

"They (referring to NCCC) have had about three months to submit revised figures and so far all we've received is a re-hash of the earlier ones," Lieske said.

Thone Plans To Support War Powers Resolution

Congressman Charles Thone of Lincoln said he will vote for enactment of the congressional war powers resolution authorizing the Congress to halt U.S. combat ordered by the President.

The resolution would prevent "future Vietnams," the First District Republican suggested in his weekly newsletter.

The issue is expected to receive a final vote in the House on Thursday, he said.

Changes Hoped

But Thone said he hopes "some changes" will be made in the original resolution.

"I will support an amendment that would require the Congress to pass a resolution against the combat before the President is forced to end it," he said.

As written, the resolution requires the President to stop a foreign battle if Congress does nothing and that, Thone suggested, may be unconstitutional.

Thone said he would oppose an anticipated amendment to allow the President to veto such a resolution.

"Under the Constitution," he said, "Congress is given the power to declare war and the President has authority over the armed forces as commander-in-chief."

Taken Powers

In recent years, Thone said, "there is no question but that . . . a series of Presidents have taken war powers away from Congress."

It wasn't until after three Presidents had involved the U.S. in the Vietnamese war that Congress in 1964 approved the Gulf of Tonkin resolution giving congressional authorization to the President to use U.S. military force in Vietnam, Thone said.

Military action was also taken in Laos without congressional approval, he said.

"It is my hope that no President will ever again lead us into war, bit by bit, without action by Congress," he said.

"Passage of the congressional war powers resolution will ensure that the public as well as Congress will have a chance to express themselves before our nation makes an extended commitment to combat."

Visits Planned To Institutions

The advisory committee to the Departments of Public Institutions and Public Welfare will make what were described as "routine" visits Thursday to the Youth Development Center at Geneva and the State Reformatory for Women at York.

The Geneva visit is scheduled to start at 9:30 a.m.; the York visit, 1:30 p.m.

Governor Tries Out Rocker

Gov. J. James Exon, wearing a Valley County Centennial hat and tie, tries his hand at rocking. One of the features of the centennial, to be held at Ord this week, will be the first annual Nebraska state rocking chair marathon, scheduled for Thursday and Friday. Looking on are Mrs. Patty Robinson of Ord, chairman of the rocking chair marathon committee, and Elmer Bergman of North Loup, member of the publicity committee.

Hare Brothers Seek Rehearing

An attorney told the Nebraska Supreme Court Monday that it failed to consider the atmosphere created by the American Indian Movement's demonstrations in Alliance in its decision upholding the manslaughter convictions of Melvin and Leslie Hare.

Lincoln attorney Wallace Rudolph in asking for a rehearing told the court that AIM struck "fear of a riot and disorder" among the jury and town of Alliance if the Hares were acquitted in the 1972 death of Raymond Yellow Thunder in Gordon.

And that fear prevented them from receiving a fair trial, Rudolph said.

Leslie and Melvin Hare have been sentenced to six- and two-year terms, respectively, for the beating death of the Gordon Indian. A unanimous (7-0) Supreme Court upheld their convictions early in June.

But Rudolph suggested Monday that Yellow Thunder's death may have been caused by alcoholism or falls due to an alcoholic condition.

"The court disregarded the fact that the deceased was a very heavy drinker," he said.

Rudolph replaces a court-appointed attorney from Chadron to represent the Hares.

Wheat Is Maturing Ahead Of Average

Dry hot weather has pushed maturity of Nebraska's wheat crop ahead of normal and harvesting may start this week in some areas.

This was the word Monday from the State-Federal Bureau of Agricultural Statistics in its weekly crop-weather report.

About 85% of the wheat has turned color, compared with 70% at this time last year and 73% normal, the bureau said.

Seventy-seven per cent of the wheat is rated good, 18% excellent and 5% fair. Most of the harvesting is expected to start the first week in July.

Corn condition is reported as mostly good to excellent, with 73% reported good, 20% as excellent and 7% as fair.

"Some farmers are irrigating and dryland corn needs rain in many areas as topsoil is becoming short," the report said.

The sorghum crop was rated 11% excellent, 82% as good and 7% fair. Light damage from greenbugs has been noted in many sorghum fields, according to the report.

Soybean fields are making excellent growth, with 20% of the crop rated excellent, and 71% good.

Alfalfa condition is rated 45% excellent, 45% good and 10% fair with about 92% of the first cutting completed.

Dry weather and high winds have caused some damage to the dry bean crop, and many fields may need reseeding, the report said.

Rainfall received throughout the state during the past week included:

Burwell	.61	North Platte	.11
Lincoln	.13	Omaha	.24
Norfolk	.13	Sidney	.03

Precipitation via sections since the beginning of the growing season, April 1, as compared to average, follows:

Fuel Tax Collection Record Set In May

Motor fuel tax collections in Nebraska, principal source of state road-building money, reached a record high last month.

Department of Roads records show the 8½ cent per gallon state tax on gasoline, combined with taxes on special fuel and interstate carrier fuel, produced $7,828,000 in May. The previous high of $7,723,000 was set in September of last year.

The May revenue represented an increase of 26 per cent over the $6,205,000 collected in the same month last year. And for the first five months of the year, collections have totaled nearly 8 per cent higher than last year.

Total travel on the state's highways and streets during May showed a gain of 6.7 per cent over the same month last year.

On Interstate 80 at the Douglas-Sarpy county line between Lincoln and Omaha, the average daily vehicle count in May was 20,446, up 11 per cent from the same month last year. For the year to date, traffic on the stretch of interstate is running 10 per cent heavier than last year.

On Interstate 80 at a point east of the Overton junction, the May traffic count averaged 8,226 per day, an increase of some 7 per cent over last year. For the first five months this year, the traffic gain has been nearly 9 per cent.

On the south leg of Interstate 80 at the Nebraska-Colorado state line, the May count averaged 3,669, up 8 per cent from last year. For the year to date, the gain has been 10.6 per cent.

Fairmont Centennial Far Cry From Historian's 1873 Account

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Fairmont — "There was not a tree, bush or twig to be seen . . . nothing but grass, buffalo bones and sod houses."

The historian who wrote thus of 1873 Fairmont should have seen the Fillmore County community during its centennial weekend. Located at the junction of U.S. 6 and U.S. 81, it probably never has looked quite so convincingly like the "crossroads of the nation" it has long proclaimed to be.

Joining its 829 current residents in celebration were a few thousand visitors. Weeks of planning by every organization in town — an even two dozen — went into the three-day affair.

"The way we had it arranged, hardly anyone in town missed getting involved in some way," said Mrs. A. J. Anderson, one of general chairman Chuck Hulse's most energetic helpers. "It's a real community effort."

Perhaps no group has worked more diligently than the extension club of which she is president, the Friendly Homemakers. For three months its six members have manned a shop selling their own craft handiwork — half the profit going to the centennial endeavor.

Mrs. Anderson is personally involved in a unique venture which will continue many months after the celebration has subsided. She is embroidering a museum-bound quilt with the names of "every town resident and former resident I can get, and that means several thousand."

Nearly every downtown show window was crammed with displays of local antiques, from button hooks to butter churns. At centennial headquarters, the big rush was on the 112-page town history compiled by the Fairmont Woman's Club under chairman Mrs. Jim Snodgrass.

Illustrated with scores of photos, the book starts with the arrival of the Burlington in 1871 (incorporation came two years later) and hits most every high spot and hot spot to the present. The hottest was the 1888 fire which destroyed the Cubbison business block "after the wooden water mains burst."

Among other main notations is the 1884 founding of the Fairmont Creamery Co., now a giant corporation. And of course there is the account of when the town soared its highest, during World War II with the Fairmont airbase in full swing.

Designed by Mrs. Vern Johnson, a special centennial seal was used on several souvenir items.

UNL Extension Conservationist Gilman Began During New Deal

He's been 'round the horn and done about everything, and now the future holds relaxation and rest and fishing.

Harold H. Gilman has been Extension conservationist at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln for 17 years. He retires at the end of June.

Gilman made his start as a conservationist in 1935 when he joined the USDA Soil Conservation Service He worked throughout Nebraska supervising camps of the New Deal's Civilian Conservation Corps until he stopped in Madison where he spent the next 14 years.

Here At Beginning

He was a conservationist when Nebraska began dividing itself into Soil Conservation Districts in 1937. And he was here to see the state become the first west of the Mississippi River to be completely blanketed with districts.

Gilman said in those days the public was much more concerned with the preservation of the soil. It took a 75% majority of the voters in any area to create a district. "You try to get 75% of any group to agree on anything now," he said.

The original 87 Soil Conservation Districts were redivided into 24 Natural Resource Districts by the Unicameral last July.

The conservation movement has some trouble getting started in Nebraska, Gilman said. Since the service was the brain child of a Democratic administration, Republican Nebraskans didn't take too well ot it. Luckily, he said, the barriers later broke down.

Best Known

Gilman is best known throughout Nebraska for the work he has done to promote soil and water conservation to elementary school children, 4-H Club members, vocational agriculture students, teachers, farmers and ranchers.

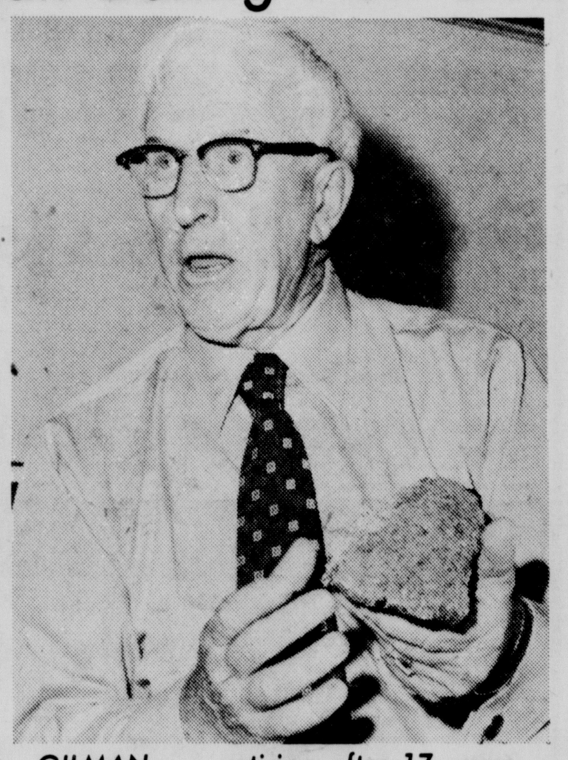

He said that by the time he retires he and his "Medicine Show" will have played to 550 audiences — over 73,000 people.

Gilman invented the show 17 years ago to show children how wind and rain promote soil erosion, and has been doing it ever since.

Another project he developed that mushroomed was the School Conservation Day Programs. The first was held in Norfolk in 1957, and since then Gilman has participated in over 500 and furnished material for countless others reaching over 7,000 school children each year.

Gilman is also responsible for developing the land judging contests, now being held throughout the country and ending with an annual national competition. Over 1,700 children and adults will enter this year.

He also invented the scoring system and wrote the training guides used in land judging. Gilman said that if he weren't retiring in June, his next project would be to rewrite the guides to allow for the judging of soils for septic tank and sewer line possibilities.

GILMAN . . . retiring after 17 years.

Non-Public Schools Tax Relief Ruled Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday struck down tax deduction as a method of aiding parents of nonpublic school students because it has the effect of furthering religion.

The deduction created by New York state fell along with a number of other aid programs in a series of decisions.

They are the latest chapter of a long effort by proponents of state aid to find a formula that would escape the Constitution's prohibition against establishment of religion.

They came as the court ended its 1972 term and began the long summer recess.

The church-state decision appears to doom federal tax credits for private and parochial education that President Nixon had pledged.

Roman Catholic leaders expressed disappointment at the rulings while civil liberties groups praised them. State authorities generally said they wanted more time to study them.

In the past, the high court has approved such things as tax exemptions for religious institutions, reimbursement of parents for bus fares for children attending religious affiliated schools and supplying textbooks for students attending such schools.

Also struck down were New York and Pennsylvania tuition reimbursement programs. The New York payments would have gone to low-income families while Pennsylvania would have reimbursed parents who certified that their children had a completed a year's work in a nonpublic school.

Looking past the form to the "substance" of the program, Justice Lewis F. Powell wrote for the majority in the Pennsylvania case:

"The state has singled out a class of citizen for a special economic benefit."

"Whether that benefit be viewed as a simple tuition subsidy, as an incentive to parents to send their children to sectarian schools, or as a reward for having done so, at bottom its intended consequence is to preserve and support religious-oriented institutions."

In condemning the tax deduction, Powell said, "In practical terms, there would appear to be little difference, for purposes of determining whether such aid has the effect of advancing religion, between the tax benefit . . . and the tuition grant . . . The qualifying parent under either program receives the same form of encouragement and reward for sending his children to nonpublic schools."

Powell was joined by Justices William J. Brennan Jr., William O. Douglas, Potter Stewart, Thurgood Marshall and Harry Blackman.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justices Byron R. White and William H. Rehnquist said they would approve tuition reimbursement and tax deductions.

Group Wants To See State Rulings

The chairman of Nebraska's Higher Educational Aid Commission said Monday he was "sure our group still will want to see the ruling of our own state Supreme Court."

However, William O. Dobler, chairman of the group formed to implement a law passed in 1972 which would permit tuition grants to private college students, said he had been "somewhat skeptical" of the new law's chances "because of the obvious direction the courts were going."

The Nebraska statute has been declared unconstitutional by Lancaster District Judge Sam Van Pelt, who based his rule on the State Constitution.

That decision has been appealed to the State Supreme Court and oral arguments have been set, but attorneys on both sides had been awaiting the federal Supreme Court ruling.

Court Decisions Touch On Many Subjects

©The New York Times

Washington — The Supreme Court also took the following actions Monday:

Adjournment

Adjourned the 1972-73 term of the court, to reconvene next Oct. 1, after clearing its docket of pending cases that had been resolved by recent decisions on obscenity, reapportionment and school desegregation.

Aliens

Invalidated a provision of the New York civil service law that denies permanent competitive positions to noncitizens. Dissenting: Rehnquist.

Declared unconstitutional a Connecticut State Court rule that prohibits aliens from taking the state bar examination. Dissenting: Burger and Rehnquist.

Civil Service

Upheld the constitutionality of the Hatch Act, which prohibits political activity by federal employes, in the first challenge to its validity in 25 years. (No. 72-634, U.S. Civil Service Commission v. National Association of Letter Carriers) dissenting: Douglas, Brennan and Marshall.

Upheld the power of states, in this instance Oklahoma, to enact similar legislation restricting political activity by public employes as long as the standards imposed are not too broad and the law gives adequate warning of what it proscribes. Dissenting: Douglas, Brennan, Stewart and Marshall.

Education

Prohibited Mississippi from puchasing textbooks and distributing them free to private schools that have racially discriminatory admission policies. (No. 72-77, Norwood v. Harrison)

Upheld a South Carolina law that authorizes state bond issues to help private colleges and universities build facilities, although some of the institutions are controlled by religious sects, on the grounds that it is basically a secular aid program. Dissenting: Brennan, Douglas and Marshall.

Kent State

Agreed to review decisions dismissing three $1 million damage suits brought against the governor of Ohio and national guard officers and enlisted men by the parents of three students killed in the 1970 disturbances at Kent State University.

Military Justice

Held that a 1969 court ruling requiring civilian indictment and trial of servicemen for crimes that are not service-connected is not retroactive to cover offenses before the decision. Dissenting: Stewart and Douglas, in part, and Marshall and Brennan.

Obscenity

Declared unconstitutional the seizure by a sheriff without a warrant of an allegedly obscene film. (No. 71-1134, Roaden v. Kentucky) Dissenting: Douglas, Brennan, Stewart and Marshall.

Rules that an obscene film can be seized as evidence after a warrant is obtained, but copies must be permitted, if necessary, so that it can continue to be exhibited pending a trial. Dissenting: Douglas, Brennan, Stewart and Marshall.

Taxes

Affirmed a decision that an airlines pilot cannot deduct for income tax purpose the cost of commuting from his home to the airport because he must carry in his car, as essential working equipment, a flight bag and overnight bag. Dissenting: Blackmun.

Welfare

Affirmed a decision invalidating the requirement in the Food Stamp Act of 1964 that a household cannot participate unless its members are all related to one another. Dissenting: Rehnquist and Burger.

Auto Explodes

Boston (UPI) — An automobile loaded with firecrackers exploded on a city street, killing one man and seriously injuring two others.

Costume Designer, Brassard, Is Newcomer To Midwest

By CYNTHIA JOHNSON
Star Staff Writer

Ever since its beginning six years ago, the University of Nebraska Summer Repertory Theatre has attracted numerous out-of-state residents to Lincoln for participation in a variety of dramatic productins.

Theater patrons who attend this season's plays at Howell Theatre will enjoy the acting of 18 Repertory Company members—nine of which come from locations other than Nebraska. States represented in the company's membership include Oklahoma, Indiana, Colorado, Nevada, Virginia, Iowa and Florida.

This summer, a very important behind-the-scenes personality—Costume Designer, Fran Brassard—is also a newcomer to Nebraska.

Born in Masschusetts, Brassard attended Traphagen School of Fashion in New York City where he obtained his trade certificate in 1957.

In 1961, he received his Bachelor of Fine Arts degree from the Boston University School of Fine Arts, Theatre Division, after which he took his exams with the United Scenic Artists, Local 829 in New York City.

According to Brassard, these exacting tests are the equivalent of doctoral exams in any other field.

Aside from summer stock and work at the Boston Children's Theatre, his initial professional experience was in regional theater in Tennessee and New Jersey.

He has also done free-lance work in a number of off-Broadway productions, worked as a draper-cutter on Broadway, as well as designing costumes for the ABC-TV series, "Directions: New Images."

During the past two years, he has served as Resident Costume Designer at Ithaca College, Ithaca, N.Y. where he also was an Assistant Professor of History of Costume and Costume Construction.

Brassard accepted a three-month position at Howell because "he wanted to be busy this summer," and also because he had never been to the Midwest.

He arrived in Lincoln on May 24, and since that time, he has been busy designing and preparing costumes for the Theatre's first production, "Company" which will open June 29.

STAR PHOTO

BRASSARD . . . works on costume

Due to the fact that Ithaca College closed its regular season in April with "Company," Brassard came to Lincoln with "some ideas in mind" with regard to Howell's first production.

His job involves designing and supervising the construction of costumes when previously-used ones are not available (Howell stores all its costumes in the event that they may be used in more than one production).

He also is in charge of obtaining the accessories — wigs, shoes and jewelry — used to complete the ensembles, and of purchasing the fabric he uses.

Surprisingly, he has found that "Generally speaking material and trim is more expensive here than it is on the East Coast."

After consultations with the director, the first step in creating a costume involves doing a basic sketch, keeping in mind the historic and geographical setting of the play in question.

Brassard then drafts and cuts the pattern, and his staff of three assistants sews the costumes. The costume fitting is also done under Brassard's supervision.

"We are given a budget for the entire summer," Brassard noted, explaining that he then must decide how much money to expend for each production.

"Of course, some plays are more expensive than others" from the costuming standpoint, he added.

He particularly enjoys designing period costumes for Shakespearian productions, even though "the drafting is more complicated" for these plays than for others.

His knowledge of the basic fashion silhouettes of given historical periods makes designing such costumes easier, although "In order to fill in the details, I frequently do some research," he said.

Working against a deadline in a not-too-plush studio on the second floor of the University Theatre Building — surrounded by sewing machines, cutting board, scissors and sequins — Brassard describes the life of a costume designer as "hectic."

But he obviously enjoys it.

After his summer in Nebraska, Brassard plans to return to New York City where he will do free-lance designing.

Skating Star 'Explains It All'

By MIKE ROYKO

Chicago — I've always been fascinated by the kinds of events that people attribute directly to God.

This interest began when I was just a kid and the family gathered to mourn the passing of my grandmother.

An elderly relative called all the children together and told us: "God came and took your grandma."

I remember that we were all puzzled by that. Why would God be driving a high-speed hit-and-run car and hitting Grandma when she was crossing a street.

As a young reporter, I happened to cover the sudden demise of a man on the west side.

His widow was standing outside their home weeping. A kindly neighbor came over and put an arm over the widow's shoulder and said:

"God wanted Joey to come and live with him."

That may have been the motive. But the homicide detectives would have wondered why God would hide in the bushes of Joey's driveway with a sawed-off shotgun.

Several years ago, an airplane crashed into a mountainside in Pennsylvania. Dozens of passengers were killed. So was the crew.

But one man survived, with only minor injuries. And he said: "God wanted me to live."

Which would make God a very strange passenger agent.

A few days ago, God turned up at a press conference called by Arthur Wirtz, the dollar-counting Chicago sports promotoer and real estate tycoon.

With Wirtz were various sleek corporate and public relations types.

But the star of the gathering was Janet Lynn, the pretty ice-skater from Rockford, Ill.

Wirtz had called the reporters together to announce that Miss Lynn, 20, would no longer scoot about the rink for glory and medals.

In the future, she would work for him as the star of the Ice Follies and other endeavors, and for this, he would pay her upwards of $1.5 million.

A reporter asked Miss Lynn why she decided to give up her amateur status and turn professional.

To some, that may sound like a dumb question.

But what the reporter was driving at was whether Miss Lynn considered $1.5 million more important than the future opportunity to win a gold medal in the Olympics.

Miss Lynn cleared it up. She replied:

"I felt it's what God wanted me to do."

That is a new one on me. Of all the roles that have been attributed to God — including smacking Grandma that way — I had never before thought of him as a sports fan.

Unfortunately, the reporters present at the press conference didn't pursue this line of questioning.

Had they done so, they might have asked why God would choose Arthur M. Wirtz as his earthly instrument to bring Miss Lynn to the Ice Follies.

As any mortal sports fan knows, Mr. Wirtz is notorious for such things as marking the price of an ordinary bottle of beer at this Chicago stadium up to the ungodly price of $1.

Then there is the question of the departure of Bobby Hull, one of Chicago's all-time sports greats.

If God would go to the trouble of arranging for Miss Lynn to work for Arthur Wirtz, why did He permit — or even decree — that Bobby Hull leave Mr. Wirtz' employment for the money paid him in Winnipeg?

We have to assume Hull's jump from this league to the next was God's doing. I can't see how God could sit in that great box seat in the sky, manipulating Miss Lynn's career, and not take an interest in the famous Bobby Hull. With all due respect to Miss Lynn, she has never had much of a slap shot.

I hope no religiously devout reader takes my comments to mean that I don't believe God is taking a hand in Miss Lynn's ice-skating career. If she says it is so, I'll believe it. Of course, I'll still wonder why so many perfectly decent $125-a-week secretaries are born with weak ankles.

What Miss Lynn says could make a lot of sense.

If you look at the condition of the world today — and, for that matter, of the world at almost any point in history — you can almost suspect that God is a sports fan.

Like most sports fans, he would be more interested in the size of Miss Lynn's contract, or who is leading the league in homers, than in the quantity of bombs being dropped on Cambodia.

Miss Lynn May have explained everything.

Open House Honors Instructors

Three visiting instructors will conduct classes this summer at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Women's Department of Physical Education.

Dr. Margaret Wilson of Lubbock, Tex., professor and chairperson of the Women's Physical Education Department at Texas Tech University, will direct a basketball workshop for women teachers and coaches throughout the state; and Fred Matthews of Colorado, and Michael Bruce of St. Louis, Mo., will work with the All-State High School Dance Group with which they will perform at a public concert Tuesday.

Matthews recently returned from studying with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, and Michael recently completed a year of study in Holland with Lucas Hoving.

The three visiting instructors were entertained at an informal open house Tuesday evening, June 19. Dr. Madge Phillips, chairman of the UNL department, was the official hostess.

Opening lead - king of hearts.

Assume you're in two spades and the play starts with three rounds of hearts. You ruff, noting that all you can afford to lose are three trump tricks.

If you make the mistake of leading the jack of trumps you go down, losing first to the king and later to the A-Q-8. But if you lead a low spade instead of the jack, you come home a winner, losing three trump tricks instead of four.

The question is how on earth you can tell, without seeing the East-West cards, that the three is a better play than the jack.

If you give the matter some thought, you eventually conclude that leading the three is the better play. You start by assuming that the trumps are divided either 3-2 or 4-1.

If they are 3-2, it makes no difference whether you lead the jack or the three. In either case you lose the trick and back comes a diamond or a club, which you win. You then lead another trump and, with both defenders following suit, you later lose a third trump trick and make the contract.

Now let's say the trumps are divided 4-1 and see the difference it makes in choosing between the jack and three.

If the singleton is the ace, king or queen, the jack play loses the contract, while the play of the three wins it.

If the singleton is not the ace, king or queen, the three play loses the contract, but the jack play also loses it. In other words, you can't make the hand if the singleton trump is a low one.

That is an excellent reason for leading the three, since it enables you to make the contract whenever it can be made.

Quit Invading Privacy

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Since the beginning of our marriage four years ago, I told my husband I wouldn't tolerate "Playboy" or any other such magazine in our home, and if he wanted to read that kind of stuff he would have to leave it at his office.

We moved recently and I found a stack of these girlie magazines in the attic. My husband laughed about it and said he read them when I was asleep or out.

Now he continues buying these magazines which he keeps in his drawer. I told him to remove them or I would throw them out. Well, he didn't, and I did. Now he tells me I owe him $8 for his destroyed magazines, and he refuses to give me his paycheck until I pay him the $8.

Am I wrong, or is he? He knew my feelings, and he was warned. He says those magazines belonged to him and I had no right to destroy them.

If you want to publish this, go ahead. There must be others with this problem.

HATES FILTH

DEAR HATES: You are wrong. Your husband has a right to read what he wishes, and to keep whatever he wants in his drawer. And if you don't quit invading his privacy and destroying his property, it could cost you more than $8.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "SELF-MADE MAN" IN SEATTLE: Perhaps your greatest liability is telling everyone about your assets.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L. A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

No-Fault Divorce Has Its Faults

The No-fault divorce law doesn't seem to make divorces any less bitter and may discriminate against women.

By Peggy Strain
For The Associated Press

"You can please all of the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time, but you can't please all the people all the time."

That truism might appropriately describe the mixed reaction which has greeted Nebraska's no-fault divorce statue since enactment nearly a year ago. It's a vast improvement to some, but a few women claim they're getting a 'faulty' substitute.

Intended to change the bitterness of former fault-finding proceedings to a more amicable dissolution of marriage when found "irretrievable broken," there is doubt as to whether LB820 has achieved that aim.

"It's still early, but I don't think it makes it any more or less bitter," Lincoln attorney Paul Galter said. He and other lawyers consulted said they believe fault-finding automatically is introduced in child custody disputes.

Equal Standing

Galter suggested that two provisions of the law tend to give men equal standing. The first is that the woman may also be ordered to pay child support and alimony; the second is that she is not automatically deemed the parent most suited for child custody.

However, Galter said "somebody sold the Legislature a bill of goods," if it was assumed no-fault would reduce litigation costs.

"The expected reduction of attorney's fees and saving the court's time has been a gross fiction. The law has increased litigation in contested cases," he said.

In addition, more contested cases are going to court. "Under former law, if the person at fault couldn't get out of the marriage he bought his way out by paying a lot of support or alimony or she by accepting little or none," Galter said.

Has divorce become easier with that bargaining power — the threat of publicly airing the couple's 'dirty linen' — now removed?

Last year there were 4,394 divorces in Nebraska compared to 3,946 in 1971.

Recent Trend

A family law professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, interprets the increase as part of a general trend that has developed in recent years. However, Roger Henderson noted, "there might have been a slight surge of people who would not have gotten one under the fault system."

Divorce is more difficult to prevent now, Henderson said, "but it doesn't mean that people are now going to get divorced who wouldn't have before."

"It's easier, but no-fault has also removed the stigma of one party being branded as the failure. I don't hink divorce laws make or break marriages," Henderson said, "people do."

Conversely, he believes the law may be a marriage-saver to some since it includes a six-month waiting period following petition before the case is heard. During that time, many may decide their differences were not so irreconcilable, he said.

Therefore, Henderson questions the need for another six-month period following the hearing before the decree becomes final. He believes most reconciliations will be made before entering the courts.

Litigation

The treatment given children is another credit to the current law, Henderson said, because "no-fault first eliminates some traumatic adversary litigation over whether there will be a divorce."

Additionally, "an attorney may be appointed for children if they are caught between and used by arguing parents."

One chief objection to the law is "that a person who really tried hard, invested time, energy and emotion in a marriage may now be dumped," Galter said.

This may be difficult for women, particularly housewives, according to Anne Patrick Trombley, a UNL law studnet and former Lincoln National Organization for Women (NOW) president.

"Her homemaking skills are virtually nontransferable in the job market and she's lost benefits of work experience, seniority and advanced training."

Glater voiced similar sentiments: "If there are inadequacies, they are to the woman. She still is usually dependent upon her husband for support. I'm not sure she's getting adequate alimony."

Some difficulty stems from "the fact that two people can't live as cheaply apart as together," Henderson said. "Between having a man pay child support, alimony and having something for the ex-husband to live on, the judge will look out for the children first."

A recent NOW task force report on no-fault divorce claims discrimination against women through possible loss of life and medical insurance, Social Security, pensions, property and through enforcement of child support awards.

Not Unique

"However, these are not unique to no-fault," Henderson said. "They were a problem before and continue to be so now."

He thinks Nebraska's law is ambiguous regarding property division if the parties can't agree, and says married women might safeguard themselves by putting their names on property titles.

As for child support, Henderson thinks the judge "tries to set it so the person receiving it can live on it and the person giving it can live with it."

But a 1972 report from the Citizen's Advisory Council on the Status of Women showing "support payments are less than enough to furnish half the support children need," leaves questions unanswered.

Track Abandonment Protested

The Nebraska Public Services Commission has protested the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad's application to abandon a 39-mile stretch of track between Fairbury and Ruskin.

The proposed abandoned line includes stations at Gladstone, Gilead, Hebron, Deshler and Ruskin.

The protest was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission with the consent of all five public services commissioners.

The commission also passed a resolution supporting the elimination of an ICC rule which requires common carriers to provide free or reduced rates to U.S. government shipments.

The commission said the rule was enacted at a time when the railroads were obligated to the federal government by reason of land grants — an obligation which no longer exists.

In view of the boxcar shortage and the railroads' financial troubles, the commission said, "There is no longer justification for our government to seek rate quotations that are at levels lower than the industries of this nation are obliged to pay."

The resolution was presented to the annual meeting of the regulatory utility commissioners recently in Chicago.

Supreme Court Clerk George Turner administered the oath.

Omahan Charged With Hit-And-Run

Bellevue (AP) — An Omaha man has been charged in connection with the hit-and-run traffic death of another man in LaVista.

Frank Gindelsperger, 33, pleaded innocent Monday to a charge relating to the death of James E. Wilson, 19, of Omaha.

Wilson was killed when the motorcycle he was driving was struck from the rear by a car. A companion, Dixie Noton, 16, of Papillion, suffered hip injuries when she was thrown from the motorcycle, which was then dragged more than a mile by the car.

Gindelsperger was arrested in his second car Saturday near Ogallala by the State Patrol.

He was freed on $2,500 bond.

Gindelsperger is charged under a little-used felony hit-and-run law.

A person convicted under the law may receive from 30 days in the county jail to five years in the state penitentiary at the discretion of the District Court judge. He also may be fined from $100 to $5,000.

Deputy Sarpy County Atty. Chris Arps said other possible charges are being studied.

Reporter H. Dwyer Is Honored

Red Cloud — "Everybody loves Harold."

With that as a theme, nearly 100 persons from a dozen communities turned out here Sunday in a testimonial to roving reporter-photographer Harold Dwyer.

At 86, the popular oldster still is a part-time staff member of the Hastings Tribune and writes a regular column. For more than a decade he has traveled central Nebraska and northern Kansas for the paper.

He also worked with weekly papers in Kansas before a lengthy "midcareer" as a salesman. He is the author of three books which combine his life's philosophy with a keen wit.

Among the mementos given him by various organizations were symbolic keys to several communities. Harry Obitz of Red Cloud served as master of ceremonies for the event, held at the restored "Little Red Schoolhouse" west of town.

Among the guests were Dwyer's son, Harold Jr., and family of Hastings, and daughter Mrs. Aileen Groem of Englewood, Colo.

Riverfront Grants OKd For Omaha

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—The federal government has approved $4.4 million in grants to assist in construction of a Riverfront industrial park nothwest of Eppley Airfield. Total cost of the park is estimated at $8.5 million.

The grants were approved by the Economic Development Administration (EDA), according to Richard L. Brown, city economic development administrator.

The EDA has informed members of the Nebraska Congressional delegation that the industrial park is expected to serve as a job center for some 2,000 persons. Most of them would be from the North Omaha area, according to a report from U.S. Sen. Carl T. Curtis.

The grants included one to Sanitary and Improvement District No. 261 for the $2,640,400 and a second to the Omaha Industrial Foundation (OIF), for $1,761,670. Both will have essentially the same officers, Brown said.

Brownsaid the industrial park will be the largest project undertaken by the OIF in its 20-year history.

Lincoln Youth To Head NTAR

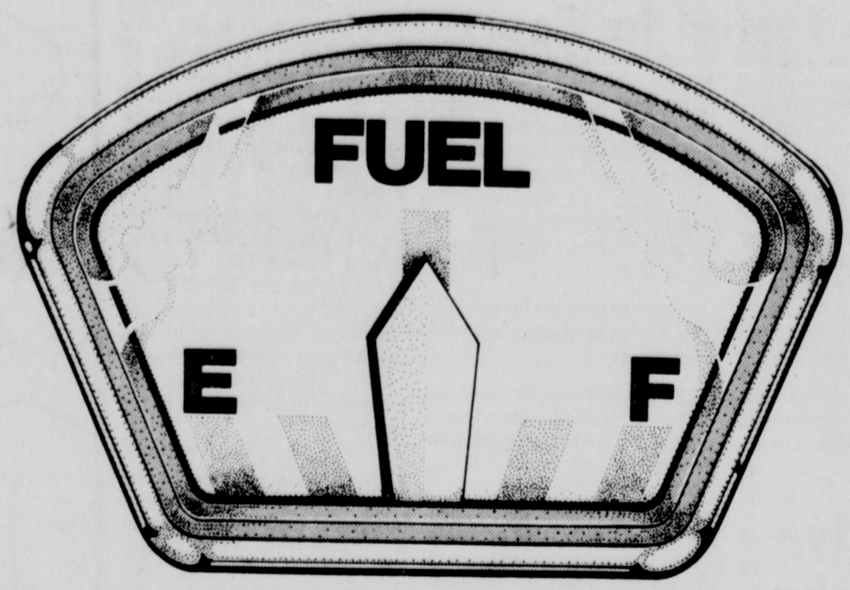

Dave Boomer, 16, of Lincoln, has been elected chairman of Nebraska Teenage Republicans (NTAR), succeeding Chip Lowe, 19, of South Sioux City.

Other new officers elected at a weekend meeting in Lincoln included Dave Collins of Overton, vice chairman, and Steve Spitsnogle of Lincoln, secretary-treasurer.

The some 50 persons attending the NTAR meeting endorsed an effort to unseat Gov. J. James Exon in next year's elections. Exon has not announced his 1974 political plans.

If this reads "half full" to you, better read it again.

What your fuel gauge should say to you at the halfway mark—now that we're in the midst of a genuine, and increasingly acute, nationwide gasoline shortage—is "half empty." What's the difference? Drive around looking for gasoline in an unfamiliar town somewhere on your vacation and you're liable to find out. The hard way.

The difference is this. "Half full" means you're assuming there's a service station right up the road ready to fill up your tank—an unrealistic assumption in view of current gasoline allocation programs. But "half empty" means you know that because of the gasoline shortage that station up the road may not be open—and you're prepared with enough gasoline to find one that is.

We call it "driving on the top half of your tank"—never letting your fuel gauge drop below the halfway point—and it's an almost certain way for Phillips 66 customers to avoid running out of gasoline while vacationing this summer.

W. F. Martin
President and Chief Executive Officer
Phillips Petroleum Company

What are some other ways drivers can avoid running out of gasoline this summer?

First of all, ask yourself if a vacation trip by car is necessary. Would public transportation do as well? It may even be an interesting change of pace.

If your vacation plans do require a car, be sure to plan ahead.

Before taking off on your vacation, have your itinerary carefully laid out. Route yourself in the most direct way, preferably along highways where gasoline stations are likely to be more numerous. Avoid driving at night, as many stations are closing much earlier. In short, know where you're going and how to get there.

Keep your engine tuned. Do it on a regular basis, as outlined in your owner's manual, and particularly before going on vacation. A poorly tuned engine—dirty filters, plugs and valves—drastically reduce gas mileage.

Keep tires properly inflated. Underinflation can reduce gasoline mileage as well as shorten the life of the tire.

Other things you can do are turn off your engine when parked, avoid gas-wasting "jackrabbit starts," and drive at steady rather than erratic highway speeds. Above all, reduce your highway speed. Driving at 50 mph rather than 70 can improve your gasoline mileage by as much as 20% or even more!

Will gasoline be rationed this summer at Phillips 66 stations?

Yes, in some areas. In fact, Phillips put into effect an allocation program on May 1, 1973.

Allocation is a way to avoid a situation that permits some areas to have enough gasoline supplies at the same time other areas are suffering shortages. Gasoline will be made available to each distributor on an equitable basis, taking into account purchases made during the past year. Thus, everybody shares the unavoidable gasoline shortage; everybody shares the available gasoline supply.

Will there be times when some Phillips 66 service stations won't have gasoline to sell?

Yes, it is possible for short periods of time.

With less gasoline available at the same time more gasoline is needed by an increasing number of cars on the highways, many service stations may have to restrict their hours of sale, or limit the number of gallons sold to each customer to avoid being sold out of gasoline.

How long is the gasoline shortage going to last?

A reasonable assumption—at least 18 months to three years.

What needs to be done?

Even with our refineries running at maximum capacity our supplies of gasoline have just not kept up with rising demand.

To make more gasoline available to consumers, the petroleum industry must build new refineries as new secure and dependable sources of crude oil can be found. And improve its distribution systems, while protecting the environment and earning a reasonable profit.

The shortage can be corrected. But it will take the effort and cooperation of a lot of different people—in business, labor and government—to get the job done.

Meanwhile, you can help. Sure, there's not much you can do about supply, but there's plenty you can do about demand. By demanding less. And that means taking a whole new, fresh look at the way you drive.

Peterson Sees Precedent In Regents' Abortion Rule

The chief spokesman for the faculty at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln says he is fearful that one of the abortion-related actions of the Board of Regents may lead to a precedent for regental limitation of faculty activity in sensitive areas.

Prof. Wallace Peterson, president of the UNL faculty senate, was referring to a resolution adopted at a meeting of the board last weekend, when the board took several actions relating to abortions.

One was to approve new guidelines which will cut by about half the number of abortions done at the Medical Center in Omaha. Another was appointment of a special task force to study the Professional Fee Plan, under which Med Center doctors may serve some patients and pocket the income from fees.

Termination

But the one which concerned Peterson was a third resolution, offered by Board Chairman Robert Koefoot of Grand Island, which put doctors on notice that if they did abortions outside the university hospital, the board would consider that reason enough to begin appointment termination proceedings.

Koefoot, who hinted that he believes some Med Center doctors may be doing some abortions only for monetary gain, first proposed "automatically" terminating any faculty member who did abortions outside the NU facility.

But that was amended after NU President D. B. Varner and attorney Warren Johnson said automatic termination could not be upheld in the courts.

Peterson, who attended the Saturday meeting of the board, said he was worried that the board "seems to be saying that if in some aspect of a staff member's professional life he does engage in performing abortions he is subject to dismissal."

Although he readily admitted he is not aware of the complications surrounding the abortion issue, Peterson said he believes "faculty members have good reason to be concerned about this kind of instrusion of the board into professional performance."

Although the board clearly intended to limit its action to abortions, Peterson said he wondered if it "can be limited to that in principle."

A similar warning flag was raised during the meeting by Medical Center Chancellor Robert Sparks, who urged the board to convey the intent of the motion to the faculty in Omaha without actually adopting it.

After the meeting, Sparks said characteristics of various academic endeavors may be different but he suggested the principle involved might be the same.

He said he believed the motion would have an impact throughout the Medical Center and possibly on other campuses.

"It gets to be a sticky question," he said.

Peterson said he hopes the regents action "might be studied much more more closely by the faculty as to its implications."

"I hope the (UNL) liaison committee will do it," he said in an interview.

Race Bias Housing Law Will Be Tested In Court

The first court test of a 1969 state law forbidding racial discrimination in housing has been filed in Sarpy County District Court in Papillion.

The complaint was filed by the Nebraska Equal Opportunity Commission against Mary Suhl, manager of the Green Acres Trailer Court, who allegedly refused to rent trailer space to Edward Russell under a "no blacks here" policy.

Complaints of housing discrimination have reached the Equal Opportunity Commission previously but were resolved before reaching the courtroom stage.

The Suhl case will be the first courtroom prosecution on a housing discrimination charge in Nebraska and could shed some light on the 1969 Nebraska Civil Rights Act's effectiveness, according to Asst. Atty. General Betsy Berger.

A hearing date has been set for Aug. 27, but briefs have not been filed as yet.

The incident occured Dec. 23, 1971, and Russell filed a complaint with the Equal Opportunity Commission on March 10, 1972.

The commission determined on Sept. 20, 1972, that probable cause to support the allegations existed and asked the attorney general to start civil action to enforce Russell's civil rights.

Public Housing Study To Begin With Omaha

A legislative study of public housing in Nebraska will begin with a survey of policies and practices undertaken by the Omaha Housing Authority, State Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha announced.

Chambers will head the study undertaken by the Legislature's Government, Military and Veterans Affairs Committee.

Chambers has asked OHA authorities for information on lease and grievance procedures, rent computations, other fees and charges, budgeting, purchasing practices, staffing, maintenance activities and other tenant services.

"After having time to consider this material," Chambers wrote OHA Commissioner Nathan Novak, "I will probably request that you and other commissioners and employes taik with my committee."

Chambers introduced Legislative Resolution 65 which authorized the committee to undertake the study of public housing throughout the state.

'Epidemic' Of Child Battering Big Cause of Death — Expert

New York (UPI) — Child battering has reached epidemic proportions in the United States and is probably the most common cause of death among children, according to a report prepared Monday for the American Medical Association (AMA).

The report by Dr. Vincent J. Fontana, chairman of New York City's task force on child abuse, said there had been a 500% increase in known cases of child abuse and neglect in the past decade.

He estimated that in 1973 physicians would deal with a minimum of 1.5 million cases of suspected child abuse, 50,000 childhood deaths would be attributed to maltreatment, and 300,000 children would be permanently injured physically or emotionally.

"These statistics strongly suggest that child battering is probably the most common cause of death in children today, outnumbering those caused by any of the infectious diseases, leukemia and automobile accidents," said Fontana.

"The magnitude of this unbelievable tragedy is not being appreciated — or accepted — by our society and the masses are unaware of its existence. This insidious epidemic of child abuse can only be stopped when people will allow it to be brought out in the open."

At a press conference in connection with the AMA's 122nd annual convention, Fontana urged doctors not only to report suspected cases of child abuse to authorities but also to initiate the necessary steps to prevent further maltreatment to the patient or other children in his family.

"A multidisciplinary network of protection needs to be developed in each community to implement the good intention of child abuse laws," Fontana said. "The great majority of our people have not recognized the rising incidence of child abuse in our society and the violent child-rearing pattern which is becoming more entrenched in our population. Child battering is a symptom of the violence running rampant in our society."

The physician said most child-abusers are the products of homes where child abuse was practiced. Abuse is usually the act of one parent, while the other passively accepts it. The average age of the mother who batters her children is 26. The average of the father is 30.

Nebraska ETV Commission Approves $1.9 Million Budget

The Nebraska Educational Television Commission Monday adopted a $1.9 million 1973-74 operating budget which sets aside $160,000 in state matching funds for eventual acquisition of a color-capable mobile unit.

At the same time, the commission approved a request to the U.S. Office of Health, Education and Welfare for a $480,000 federal grant to buy and equip a new mobile van with as many as three color cameras.

The commission's only mobile van, which has been in operation several years, has black-and-white-only capability.

Assistant General Manager Boyd Rooney told the commission he believes chances are good the federal grant will eventually be approved, but he said the time involved is uncertain.

He said he is not sure the application will be approved during the coming fiscal year, since fewer federal dollars are available than there are applications.

But, in answer to a question from Commissioner Brendan McDonald, president of Kearney State College, Rooney said when it becomes operative the color unit will help the ETV Commission do more outstate programming while the legislative session is in progress.

McDonald had noted that daily coverage of the Legislature cuts back on the commission's ability to do programming from other locations during those months each year.

The new fiscal year budget of $1,914,335, up from a budget of about $1.6 million in the current year, is largely state general fund money.

The commission expects to earn about $7,500 during the next year from rental of tower space.

The commission was told that it had to defer some equipment purchases to go through with a plan to raise salaries of engineers to levels comparable with those earned in commercial television.

The increases cost about $47,000, an amount which was to have been included in amendments to the appropriations bill in the Legislature. The amendment was never adopted, however, since the senators decided to adopt Gov. J. James Exon's original recommendations.

Much depnds on the complete horoscope and the development of the individual native. In November, many born under this zodiacal sign will be undergoing changes where family affairs are concerned, including possible change of residence.

* * *

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid extravagance. Don't feel it is necessary to spend in order to impress others. Friendly persuasion need not be accompanied by expensive gift. If you give, give from the heart. Otherwise, gesture could backfire.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accept challenge. Finish what you start. Trust your own judgment. Professional superior actually wants to aid. But it is your own sense of timing that gets job done. Know it and act accordingly. Aries, Libra persons are involved.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What had been buried in your subconscious is ready to surface. Realize that indeed truth can set you free. Throw off secret fears. Give full play to creative energies. You do have right to enjoy life. Act like you know it!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Many of your innate qualities exhibit themselves and are admired. Your intuitive intellect works overtime. You get hunch and it is accurate. You win friends, influence people. But there is gnawing question concerning investment. Wait for more information.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): There are numerous opportunities. Key is to be selective. Good contract may be offered. But remember alliegiance to one in authority. Don't give up something of value for mere speculation. Do some asking and get some answers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Family affairs could dominate. Question of travel and costs arise. Be aware of details. Means don't take for granted that someone else is minding the store. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons are likely to be in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Relationship intensifies. Don't play games with emotions. Analyze consequences. You get nothing for nothing. Strive for mature approach. Gemini, Virgo individuals could play key roles. Significant change occurs. Romance is highlighted.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stick close to home base. Stay with what is familiar. Reach understanding with mate, partner. Maintain low profile. Let others have their say. Do more listening than talking. There could be legal complication.

SATITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Obtain valid hint from Scorpio message. Time is on your side. Wait and observe. See persons in light of reality. Don't fool yourself. Dependents make demands. Pisces, Virgo could play promiment roles.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Financial picture is better than you might currently perceive. You will be repaid for efforts. Elevation in standing is due. There will be more prestige. You find constructive emotional outlet.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish rather than begin—don't give up on special effort, project. You are close to completion and added recognition. Aries, Libra persons could be involved. Accent is on prestige, unique honor.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): What you desire is subject to change. You are not on solid ground. More information is needed before you arrive at final decision. Leo, Aquarius persons might play prominent roles. Short trip is on agenda.

By October, you will be finished with problem, relationship which has caused delay, loss and embarrassment. You get proverbial second chance. Many born under Capricorn are drawn to you. Covering Many Fronts

Covering a wide range of sports fronts and starting with an apology to Alan Schroeder of 4830 Woodland Ave. for the delay in letting him get something off his mind, but we were waiting for several others like him, who had expressed their "humble" opinions in irate telephone calls and had promised to follow with it in writing on a recent Sport Signals column concerning the Indy 500.

Here's Alan's thoughts: "After reading your article, the only conclusion I can come to is that you are not an auto racing fan and know very little about the sport of auto racing.

"Therefore my suggestion to you is that you refrain from making comments about it in the paper with the exception of editorials. Your article made me shake my head in wonder at how uninformed and narrow-minded you are. If you don't like the sport, leave it alone. Don't crucify it because it doesn't suit your taste."

Alan — At least your suggestions are much softer and would be much less painful in carrying out than what many of those who chose to use a telephone instead of a pen suggested I do.

Riggs Does It All

Bobby Riggs is best known for his "hustling" abilities in tennis and golf, but the hero of the Geritol Generation can excel in other sports also.

In a recent free throw shooting contest against Dick Van Arsdale of the Phoenix Suns, Riggs made good on 16 of 20.

No one is yet saying what Van Arsdale did with the episode due for a future showing on CBS-TV's 60 Minutes program.

Professional baseball management has generally gotten an unwarranted reputation for being money hungry with little regard for the fans.

No better refutation of that popular idea is the ticket prices set for the Aug. 6 contest at Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium between the Kansas City Royals and an American Association All-Star team.

You can buy a box seat for $3, a reserved seat for $2.50 and a general admission ticket for $2. That's got to be the entertainment bargain of the year, considering what it costs to take your family to the movies these days.

Distance No Problem

The longest course the touring pro golfers will play this year is the Quail Hollow Country Club at Charlotte, N. C., site of the Kemper Open while the shortest is the Cypress Point course at Pebble Beach, Calif., on the layouts used for the Crosby Tournament.

Quail Hollow measures 7,219 yards while Cypress Point is only 6,464 yards. But the distance is no problem for the touring pros.

Tom Weiskopf won the Kemper Open with a 17-under-par 271 while Jack Nicklaus won the Crosby with a six-under-par 282.

Oklahoma football star Joe Wylie went through his four years on the Sooner campus with nothing but straight A's in the classroom.

Another portion of that CBS-TV's 60 Minutes program mentioned earlier will show Riggs playing tennis against singers Paul Anka and Steve Lawrence with eight chairs on Rigg's side of the court and with Riggs carrying a large bag of Las Vegas chips on the court at Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas.

Nebraskans who went skiing in Colorado the past season helped the Colorado ski resorts to set a record with 3,988,559 skiers, an increase of 23.5 per cent over the previous season.

When Keith Wortman's brother came to Lincoln recently for the former Nebraska football all-American's wedding, he liked Nebraska's capital city so well that he returned to California only long enough to pack up his things and move to Lincoln.

Frontier Airlines has announced that it has signed moody pro golfer Dave Hill as its Professional Golf Representative. We hope that that doesn't mean if Hill doesn't like your city's golf course, Frontier will quit flying there.

Royal Knight Eyes Fifth Straight In Gold Cup

Omaha — Kenneth Opstein's Royal Knight, unbeaten in his last four starts, goes after the biggest prize in his career in the $50,000-added Omaha Gold Cup Stakes at Ak-Sar-Ben Saturday.

The best field in Omaha Gold Cup history is expected for the one mile and one-sixteenth race for 3-year-olds. At least five imports are primed to test the local favorites.

In his last start on June 16, he won by one and three-fourths lengths in the $20,000-added 4-H Handicap, carrying 127 pounds. Because of the allowance conditions, he only has to carry 120 pounds in the Gold Cup.

Earlier in the meet he romped to 16- and four-length victories in two allowance tests at one mile and 70 yards. At Grand Island's Fonner Park, he posted a 14-length victory in the Nebraska Derby at one mile.

Hearts of Lettuce, owned by P. D. Tattersall and J. W. Welch of Alexandria, La., tops the list of imports. Hearts of Lettuce, who arrived at Ak-Sar-Ben last week, finished second to Our Native after leading most of the way in the $100,000-added Ohio Derby at Thistledown.

Cades Cove, owned by the Rip Stable of Arlington Heights, Ill., and Kings Reel, owned by G. Robins of Palatine, Ill., are expected to ship in from Arlington Park in Chicago. Jack Grunwald of Lakewood, Colo., is expected to send in Mike James from Denver. Mike James was one of the 2-year-old standouts here last year.

Trainer Jack Van Berg has a chance to sweep Ak-Sar-Ben's Big Four for the second straight year. Last Saturday, Joey Bob, owned by the M. H. Van Berg Stable in partnership with the former baseball star Joe Adcock, claimed his second straight Cornhusker Handicap. A year ago he went on to also claim the Board of Governors' Handicap.

This year's Board of Governors' is scheduled for July 4 and the purse has been raised to $75,000-added.

Van Berg will send out Island Leader, who he owns in partnership with W. E. Trotter II of New Orleans, in an attempt to pick up a second straight Gold Cup. A year ago, British Fleet swept the big Ak-Sar-Ben stakes for 3-year-olds.

USA ALL-STARS WIN

Davis Slams Homer, 6-2

. . .BARR STARTS SCORING

By MARK GORDON
Star Sports Writer

Omaha — Anthony Davis has been in the spotlight before, but he was ready to equate his performance at Roseb Rosenblatt Stadium Monday night with his most memorably day in athletic competition.

"Yes, I'd say that hitting a homer against Japan was as good as my day against Notre Dame last year," said the rightfielder from Southern California. "I'm just getting into shape now and that's why that hit was so important."

Davis' 360-foot homer over the right field wall in the fifth inning added an insurance run as the United States Collegian All-Star baseball team took a 6-2 decision from the Japanese All-Star team before 3,122 fans. It was the first game in Omaha of the seven-game series and gave the Americans a 3-0 lead in the second annual series.

The fourth and fifth game will be played here on Tuesday and Wednesday beginning at 7:30 p.m. The final two games are set for Friday and Sunday at Anaheim Stadium in California.

Unlike the two previous games at Dodger Stadium in Los Angeles when the Americans needed 11 innings before winning, the United States settled the issue Monday with four runs in the third inning.

A home run by USC pitcher Mark Barr opened the scoring. A double by Davis, singles by shortstop Roy Smalley and leftfielder Ken Huizenga and an error provided Barr with the necessary hitting support.

But it was Davis, recovering from an automobile accident that severed a tendon in his right foot, who caught the fans' attention. He's best remembered for scoring six touchdowns for the USC football team in a 45-23 victory against Notre Dame last season at the Los Angeles Coliseum.

"It was a fast ball (the home run pitch)," said the sophomore from San Fernando, Calif. "It was about waist high and I caught it and just over-powered it.

"I've never faced a pitcher like that who throws submarine-style," he continued. "I had to wait until he was coming around before I could swing at it."

The home run was the first Davis has hit this year for USC and USA coach Rod Dedeaux. Davis had earlier hit a home run this season for the Orioles of the California Collegiate League.

"I haven't really played that much baseball this year," he said. "I'm just rounding into shape now."

College World Series' fans here two weeks ago saw Davis on only one occasion — when he pinch hit for the Trojans who went on to achieve an unprecedented four straight national baseball championships.

Only two of the nine USA starters were not from Dedeaux' USC club.

They included first baseman Jeff Malinoff (California-Irvin) and catcher Pat Russell (California State-Northridge).

Lincoln's Midwest Speedways staged a Bikini Nite Sunday night with every female showing up in a bikini being admitted free.

The bikini-clad gals then were paraded before the fully-clothed spectators, whose applause was used to judge the gals.

Crampton Tops PGA Cash List

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Crampton, the first foreigner ever to win more than $200,000 in a single season on the American pro golf tour, surpassed Jack Nicklaus as the year's leading money winner.

Crampton, who equalled Nicklaus' season record of four victories when he won the $160,000 American Golf Classic Sunday, increased his 1973 purse to $204,209.

Nicklaus, who tied for ninth in the tournament over the 7,180-yard Frestone Country Club course, dropped to No. 2 with $193,946, according to figures released by the PGA Tournament Players Division Monday.

Ficke Collects Lead In State Junior Golf

By RANDY YORK

Jerry Ficke, buoyed by a 34 on the first nine, fashioned a one-over par 73 for his initial 18 holes, and a 153 total in two trips around Holmes Golf Course Monday to assume a two-stroke lead in the Nebraska State Junior Boys Golf Championships.

The effort marked a major step in Ficke's bid to win back-to-back tournaments, having captured the Lincoln boys city title last week.

The 15-year-old Lincoln Southeast sophomore-to-be eagled the first hole of his 36-hole tour of Holmes enroute to the 34.

He carded subsequent rounds of 39, 38, and 42 to hold off the challenges of Grand Island's Jim Meyer and Omaha's Harry Lockwood.

Both Meyer and Lockwood fired three-over-par rounds of 155, but will get a chance to overtake Ficke Tuesday in the 18-hole championship flight windup at Holmes.

"I think it'll take a 75 to beat him (Ficke)," said Meyer, a 15-year-old junior-to-be at Grand Island High School.

Meyer, however, was confident of his own chances after registering two eagles on the first nine holes of Monday's opening-day competition.

"I've never had two eagles in the same round. But I've been getting a flurry of them in the last week," noted Meyer, who put together three straight rounds of 40 after the opening 35.

Meyer equalled Ficke's eagle on the 525-yard, par 5 No. 1 hole and recorded another one on the 505-yard par 5 eighth hole.

"Last week, I eagled three holes three straight days," offered Meyer, pointing out that one of those came in the state junior qualifying at his home Riverside Country Club course in Grand Island.

On that one, he hit a driver 280 yards and holed out from 120 yards with a 9-iron on the par 4 No. 15. He also holed out on a 325-yard par 4 and sunk a short putt on a 454-yard par 5 for two other eagles at Riverside last week.

"If I can get rid of a few problems, I think I have a good chance to win," said Meyer, who tied for sixth in the state-wide event last summer. "I hit one shot into a lake today and had to take a double bogey."

Lockwood, another 15-year-old who will be a junior at Omaha Westside High School, used putting a chipping proficiency to challenge with rounds of 38, 40, 39 and 38.

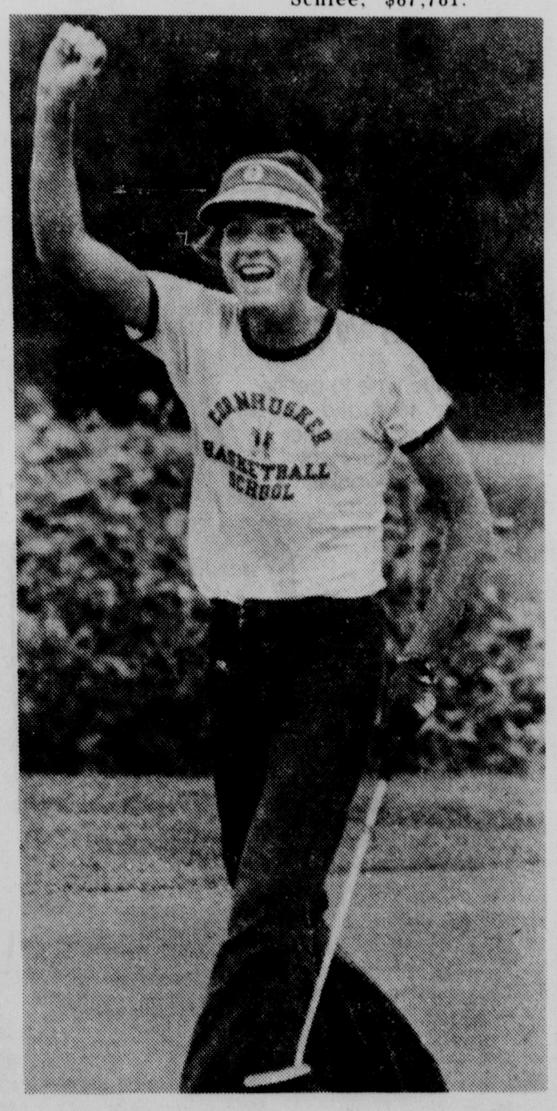

"I never get eagles," conceded Lockwood, "but I've been getting the ball down. I only 3-putted twice all 36 holes today."

Two other golfers were in excellent position to challenge for the championship after Monday's competition. They were Lincoln's John Hergert and Omaha's Mark Wade.

Hergert used a 36 on his final nine and Wade fashioned a 37 on his first nine enroute to 156 totals, three strokes off the pace.

The championship flight winner will be determined by 54-hole totals. Tuesday's 18-hole totals will determine placings in the other three flights. Final-day competition starts at 8 a.m.

Kings' Owners Approve Sale

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Stockholders of the corporation which owns the Kansas City-Omaha Kings voted Monday to sell the National Basketball Association club to a group of Kansas City businessmen.

The voting was at a meeting in Cincinnati, and the results were announced through the Kings office in Kansas City.

Completion of the sale depends upon approval by the NBA's board of governors. They are expected to concur at the annual meeting Thursday in Los Angeles.

The Kings have been owned by Missouri Valley Pro Sports Inc. About 70 per cent of its stock is held by Jeremy and Max Jacobs of Buffalo, whose Emprise Corp. operates refreshment concessions at ball parks, arenas, auditoriums and stadiums through subsidiaries around the country. They also have interests in horse racing tracks.

The new owner will be Kings Professional Basketball Club Inc. Its main figures are Ray Evans, former All-America football star at the University of Kansas and Kansas City banker, and H. Paul Rosenburg, president of Midland Lithographing Co. in Kansas City.

The sale announcement said the price was between $5 million and $5.1 million. It noted that the new owners will take over $1.9 million in deferred obligation contracts. Most of this is represented by contracts with players and Coach Bob Cousy.

The Kings suddenly moved from Cincinnati to Kansas City at the close of the season in 1972.

Terrell To Face Wepner Again?

Paterson, N.J. (AP) — State Athletic Commissioner Abe J. Greene directed Monday that a rematch be held "within short order" between Ernie Terrell and Chuck Wepner, whose heavyweight battle Saturday ended in a widely disputed decision victory for Wepner.

Greene also said he is withholding recognition of Wepner as the U.S. heavyweight champion because of the dissent of newspapermen who covered the fight. The fight had been billed as being for the American heavyweight title.

The decision in the 12-round bout was made by the referee alone, as is customarz under New Jersey boxing rules. Referee Harold Valan scored it 7-5 for Wepner.

Butkus Hits Pact Snag

CHICAGO (AP) — Middle Linebacker Dick Butkus said Monday that his contract talks with the Chicago Bears had hit a snag and he may ask to be traded.

"I would rather be traded than play out my option," said the veteran of eight seasons with the National Football League club.

"At first I didn't think there would be any serious problems in signing a new contract," he added. "But something has turned up that changed everything. It doesn't look as if it will be settled."

Butkus and Ed Keating, an attorney for the Mark McCormack Agency in Cleveland, did not elaborate. Keating reportedly had his first meeting with Bear negotiator Bobby Walston only last week.

"We'll continue negotiating," Walston said, "until we resolve it one way or the other—until Dick signs or doesn't sign. I hope to get it settled, but I can't say now whether we will or won't."

Wichita Bombs Royals, 13-5

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Designated hitter J. C. Martin drove in four runs and Chris Ward and Andy Thornton homered Monday night to lead the Wichita Aeros to a 13-5 American Association victory over the Omaha Royals.

The Aeros came up with eight runs, all after two out, in the fourth inning to hand Ron Tompkins his fourth pitching victory in a rare starting role.

Thornton's home run in the fifth was his 16th of the season since joining the Aeros a month ago.

Martin had a double and two singles in his first three times at bat.

Terrio Earns Sidney Position

SIDNEY, Neb. (AP)—Former Nebraska lineman Bob Terrio has been signed as head football coach at Sidney High School, officials announced Monday.

At the same time, officials said Joe Folda, a standout basketball player at the University of Northern Colorado, will be the school's head basketball coach.

Terrio replaced Bob Roach who has accepted a similar position in the Seward School system. Terrio, a 1972 NU graduate, has assisted in coaching the Nebraska freshman team. He was an all Big Eight lineman in 1972.

Familiar Foes Set To Oppose Secretariat

CHICAGO (AP) — Our Native and My Gallant will oppose Triple Crown winner Secretariat in a special race at Arlington Park June 30, track President John F. Loome announced Monday.

There had been doubts about Our Native competing, but an Arlington spokesman said that Tom Pritchard, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Pritchard, one of Our Native's three owners, had informed the track:

"Our Native will run in the Arlington invitation next Saturday as planned."

Pritchard said that a committment made by trainer-owner Bill Resseguet would be honored.

Last Friday, Mrs. Pirtchard had said she did not want to start Our Native and that Dr. Ed Thomas, the other owner, agreed with her.

After Neil Hellman announced that Linda's Chief would not run, Arthur Appleton offered My Gallant and Philip Teinowitz offered Blue Chip Dan.

Loome, thanking Teinowitz for his offer, said My Gallant was chosen because it was fell that he would be a "shade the more competitive of the two."

The $125,000 race, with $75,000 to the winner, $30,000 to second and $20,000 to third, will be run at 1⅛ miles and will be shown live on ABC-TV's Wide World of Sports. Post time is 6:17 p.m., EDT.

There also will be win betting only, the Arlington spokesman said, and the track's infield will be open to the public for the first time in memory.

Our Native and My Gallant each lost twice to Secretariat in his incredible drive through the Triple Crown races of the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes. Our Native finished third in the Derby and in the Preakness, beaten 10½ lengths each time. My Gallant was ninth in the Derby, almost 21 lengths back of Secretariat, and third in the Belmont, beaten 31½ lengths.

Deer Permits Dwindling, Five Units Still Open

Virtually all of the firearm-deer permits for the eastern two-thirds of Nebraska have been spoken for, according to the Game and Parks Commission.

As business began Monday morning, the only permits remaining in any of the eastern or central Nebraska units were 60 in the Missouri Unit. Most or all of these are expected to be sold by the time the weekend's mail is processed. Units with permits remaining include: Sand Hills, 955; Platte, 376; Frenchman, 73; Plains, 240; and Upper Platte, 733.

On the fishing scene, reports of Game and Parks Commission conservation officers in the field tell of varying angling success across the state. Fishing hotspots include:

PANHANDLE

Lake Minatare — walleye to 4 pounds taking trolled artificials; smaller walleye hitting minnows and worms fished from the bank; occasional small white bass on artificials;

Harlan County Reservoir (Alma) — white bass to 12 inches at night along the dam; walleye to 3 pounds in the shallows on worms.

Blue River Fish Biting

The Blue River system in Jefferson County has apparently been a hot spot for big flathead catfish recently, and Fairbury seems to have a corner on the market for trophy cats, judging by Master Angler Award applications.

Robert Gerhardt of that city took a whopper weighing 47 pounds, eight ounces, while Harry Seachord pulled one in weighing an even 46 pounds and Randy Lobner socred with a 44-pounder.

Yankees' Kline Hurt

Richards Gets Midwest Win

Hard-luck Jay Sterns had another heartbreaker as Terry Richards won at Midwest Speedway Sunday night in the A feature.

Sterns, who has won once this year at Midwest but led in all other A features at some point only to have car trouble forcing him out of the race, suffered a broken ball joint at the beginning of the last lap and despite a ½ lap lead couldn't hold on for the win.

At Eagle Raceway Sunday night, Lincoln's Wayne Holz won his first Nebraska Modified Racing Association feature in three years and his second ever by outlasting Lloyd Beckman and Frank Brennfoerder.

Husker Trio Skips Game

Nebraska football fans who watched the East-West game on TV Saturday night were surprised that the West's No. 79 wasn't Rich Glover, the Huskers all-American middle guard.

Glover and teammate Monte Johnson had both been chosen for the West roster, but bowed out under pressure from the pro teams which had drafted them.

Several clubs, fearful of injury to their rookie stars, requested players to skip the contest. Glover was a third-round choice of the New York Giants, while Johnson had been drafted in the second round by the Oakland Raiders.

NU halfback Johnny Rodgers, originally chosen for the game, was unable to participate since his Canadian team, the Montreal Alouettes, had already begun pre-season practice.

New Pollution Controlled Asphalt Plant 80% Done

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The city's new pollution controlled asphalt plant at 31st and Baldwin — which will provide the material to patch those reappearing chuckholes in city streets — is 80% completed.

Public Works Director Bob Obering told the City Council Monday that the plant should be in operation in about 60 days.

The plant will replace the facility near 14th and W and will produce an asphaltic concret mixture.

Not Compatible

The decision was made to relocate the plant, Obering said, because the city was running out of room at the present site and because such an operation is not compatible with use of surrounding land owned by the University of Nebraska.

He compared the pollution control device to a "bag system" which will control the dust exhaust emissions from the plant.

"It's much like an overgrown vacuum cleaner in operation," he explained.

Minimum Curb Cuts

Obering also reported at the morning work session that the council soon will be receiving a proposed ordinance specifying minimum curb cut requirements.

Currently, there are no such requirements.

On some of the city's narrower streets with the smaller curb cuts of 12 to 14 feet, motorists have been unable to drive their cars in and out of their driveways.

"The driveway can be only eight feet wide if that's the way they want it," he said, "but, we need wider curb cuts to give them room to get in and out."

Plan Not prepared

In answer to an inquiry from Councilman Steve Cook, Obering said he had not prepared a plan for merging services with the County Engineering Department.

Cook commented that such a merger could be made in the Arthur D. Little report on city-county consolidation.

Obering replied that there have been times during the county's "slack time" when his department could have used the county's help.

"This year we farmed out more engineering work than ever before to private contractors — and we're still behind," he remarked.

New Auditing Firm

Also at the work session, Lincoln Electric System (LES) Administrator Walt Canney requested council authorization to seek a new auditing firm.

Canney reported that all LES's accounting and auditing is done by Nebraska Public Power District officials in Columbus.

By moving the operation to Lincoln, Canney contended that the city could do it more efficiently and save money in the process.

Council members also unofficially agreed.

City Urged To Hire Budget Researcher

Freshman City Councilwoman Sue Bailey proposed Monday that the council use some of the city's revenue sharing money to help resolve the problem of how to spend the bulk of the city's $4.5 million in revenue sharing funds.

Mrs. Bailey suggested that the council hire a staff person, possibly on a one-year trial basis, to assist the council in preparation of budgets.

Specifically, that staff person could research and report back to the council the merits of funding such human service type programs as were requested by a number of agencies two weeks ago at a revenue sharing public hearing.

'Rubber Stamp'

Such assitance is needed, she contended, because, "I don't want to be in a position of being a rubber stamp on the budget."

The council has the final say on setting the budget, proposed by Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf.

Councilman Steve Cook suggested that instead of hiring an individual, he would prefer hiring a consulting firm to do the original research.

"You don't have long-range commitments with a firm," he explained.

Contingency Fund

Mrs. Bailey also suggested in the morning work session that the council set up a contingency fund to continue programs terminated by the federal government.

If the council could fund such programs on a 60-day basis, it would give the city time to determine if there is a continued need for such programs, she said.

City Atty. Dick Wood noted that he is in the process of doing an item-by-item review of all budget requests made at that public hearing on uses of revenue sharing money.

That report will determine if the city could legally fund those programs under revenue sharing guidelines.

Clinton Area Change Of Zone Is Put On Pending By Council

The City Council Monday held off action on a controversial change of zone application for an apartment at 23rd and Y which has come under fire from the Clinton Neighborhood Organization.

At the request of Councilwoman Sue Bailey, the council placed the application of Ted Baugher on pending three weeks in order to get a report from the planning department.

Mrs. Bailey said she wanted to know what affect construction of the apartment building would have on the area or if the apartment would deter redevelopment in the area.

Comprehensive Plan

Representatives of the Clinton organization have contended that such a development should not be built without a comprehensive plan for rebuilding the entire area.

Councilman Dick Baker cast the lone dissenting vote, noting that both the planning director and City-County Planning Commission have recommended approval.

Casting votes to delay action were council members Steve Cook, Max Denney, Bob Sikyta and Mrs. Bailey.

Sikyta and Denney only agreed to the delay when Mrs. Bailey put a time limit on the hold over.

Off-Street Parking

In other action of the council authorized construction and land acquisition for off-street parking facilities in University Place.

The parking lots would be constructed in the vincinty of No. 48th between Huntington and Madison.

The projected is supported by the University Place Businessmen.

The council decided not to delete two lots from the project as requested by several elderly residents who could be displaced with construction of the parking lots.

Residents May Stay

Instead, the council agreed to adopt a resolution at next week's meeting to allow the long-time residents to remain on the property until they desire to turn that property over to the city.

At last week's public hearing representatives for the J. E. Bartleys, of 4827 Madison, and Mrs. D. C. Travis, of 4703 St. Paul, said those residents would be forced to move and that the move would be a hardship.

Additional parking spaces for University Place businesses will be needed in the future when No. 48th is widened, the council was told, with loss of all public parking along that arterial.

Baker said, "The key issue is the preservation of some of the older commercial areas. Through this type of program we can deter the trend (of deterioration) which seems to be occuring in such areas."

Denney commented that there was no reason why the city should not provide parking for such commercial areas in light of the fact that the city is planning to help finance a downtown parking garage.

Bothered By Method

Cook stated he was bothered "by the way we go about designating properties in condemnation proceedings," adding he was concerned about displacing people.

In further business, the council held over action on granting Burlington Northern Railroad and Archer-Daniels-Midland Co. authority to construct a railroad spur over No. Cotner Blvd. north of Thayer.

Baker said he was concerned that signalization of the spur should "go hand-in-hand" with construction of the tracks.

Baker, a member of the Railroad Transportation Safety District (RTSD), said he had a letter from the RTSD indicating that signals will be installed.

However, he stated, "I'm somewhat leary of the time schedules when dealing with railroads — somehow they get pushed off."

Request Rejected

The council unanimously rejected the request of Hinky Dinky for a permit to use a public sidewalk to operate a trash compactor at the 26th and O grocery store.

The compactor was to replace the incinerator.

Council members questioned why the compactor would be placed on the public sidewalk to the east of the building instead of putting it in the parking lot to the west.

Asst. City Atty. Charles Humble reported that the compactor would encroach on about ten feet on the sidewalk and that the sidewalk location was probably chosen because of its proximity to the loading dock.

Bad Precedent?

Cook commented that the council would like to get rid of the incinerator — but that he did not want to set a precedent of granting such a public use.

No representative of Hinky Dinky appeared to explain the firm's request.

The council also was unable to reach a decision on annexing a piece of land near 27th and Superior. The city has received a request for utility service in the area, but a landowner has objected to being brought into the city.

The vote was 3 to 2, with four votes needed for a majority decision.

Mrs. Bailey, Cook and Denney voted for annexation, while Baker and Sikyta objected. Helen Boosalis was out of town, while John Robinson was attending another meeting.

In further action the council approved the appointment of David Calhoun to fill the unexpired term of Donald Shurleff to the Lincoln General Hospital Board.

The council also:

Reading Project Gains 'Ed Pacesetter Award'

An "educational pacesetter award" which certifies a program as worthy of adoption in other school systems has been awarded to an innovative reading project centered in Lincoln.

Project Instruct was one of 107 such programs throughout country picked from among 2,000 Title III projects as good enough to be exported to other schools.

Announcement of the award was made by Arthur Ballentine, chairman of the National Advisory Council on Supplementary Centers and Services.

The advisory committee sponsored the evalutation of Title III programs around the country.

The Lincoln-based project, which enters its third year this fall, scored 98 out of 100 points on the evaluation.

As part of its award for that achievement, it was granted another $30,000 of federal funds to disseminate the project to other school systems across the state.

Project Director Carl Spencer said some 75 schools will be tied into the project in Lincoln this fall.

Maneuvering sail-powered surfboards are a pair of swimmers during a race on Starnberg Lake, near Munich, West Germany. In the mountain lake resorts of Germany, Switzerland and Austria, surf-sailing has become very popular since it was introduced two years ago. Queen Visits Canada

©The New York Times

Toronto — Queen Elizabeth came to Canada Monday for a cross-country tour designed to provide a maximum of personal contact with her subjects in this corner of the commonwealth.

"It's very much a people tour, for her to see the people and for them to see her," explained a spokesman, outlining an itinerary that will take the queen and Prince Philip through two dozen towns and cities in four provinces before they go back home on July 5.

The schedule includes school presentations, opening ceremonies, banquets, hospital visits and, as often as possible, a feature that Buckingham Palace planners call "the walk-about," in which the queen chats informally with people in the crowds.

The first walk-about, at the Toronto Airport this afternoon, was a rather more decorous version of what American presidents do at airports. With a broad smile, the queen walked along police barricades, chatting easily with people who had been waiting there for several hours, but she did not shake hands with them.

Southern Ontario is traditionally a center of great loyalty to the crown, and everywhere the queen went on her first day here, the crowds were large and friendly.

Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip will spend the rest of this week criss-crossing Ontario, where one-third of Canada's people live, including trips to Kinston, London and Niagara-In-The-Lake.

Standards On Obscenity Claimed Strict In Lincoln

Dick Randolph

The Lincoln community apparently has strict standards on the distribution of allegedly obscene materials — based on citizen comments the Lancaster County Attorney's Office has received, Lancaster Deputy County Attorney Bob Gibson said Monday.

However, Gibson, speaking at a meeting of the Executive Club, said that problems still remain in enforcing laws against the distribution of obscene materials, even in the wake of the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling on obscenity.

Gibson said that even after a prior adversary hearing has been held and a judge and jury have determined a film or a number of books are obscene, that the merchant may still have similar books or films that he can sell.

"We can buy a film for $200 and the judge and jury may declare it obscene and we can seize all the copies of it," Gibson said, "but there might be hundreds of other films like it."

Gibson said that it was difficult to file criminal complaints because the people running allegedly pornography shops never come near the state.

In other action at the Executive Club meeting, the group elected Dick Randolph president. Other officers elected were Rad Ward, vice president, and Bill Swanson, secretary-treasurer.

Directors elected were Dr. Steve Statton, Wes Maser, Mel Andelt and Charles Roper.

1,106 Filling Stations Agree To Prices Cut, Council Says

©The New York Times

Washington — The government reported Monday its first price rollbacks under President Nixon's June 13 freeze.

The Cost of Living Council said that 1,106 filling stations were found last week to be overcharging for gasoline, by an average of two cents a gallon, and had agreed to reduce their prices.

There were two significant aspects to the announcement issued by the council's special freeze group:

— It reflected the administration's strong desire, signaled by the president when he announced the freeze, to halt the upward trend in gasoline prices.

"It marked a move away from the recent practice of soft-pedaling wage-price enforcement action. The administration evidently is shifting back toward its earlier emphasis on publicity as a deterrent to wage-price violations.

The council has been issuing a daily stream of press releases in an effort to convince consumers and businessmen that unlike Phase III of the stabilization effort, which was widely regarded as ineffective, the new freeze has teeth, as will Phase 4.

In addition to formal reports and announcements, officials of the Cost of Living Council are moving to make themselves more available to the press by means of that controversial Washington device known as the "background briefing."

Such meetings sometimes lead to newspaper and broadcast reports in which the public is told what federal officials are saying but not who, or even which agency, is saying it.

The internal Revenue Service headquarters in Washington directed that refunds to customers who were overcharged would be required only if a gasoline station's or oil company's overcharges had totaled more than $1,000. Under this rule of thumb, only a Connecticut Wholesaler, identified as Consumers Petroleum Products of Harford, was directed to make a refund of about $2,500 for allegedly overcharging by a half-cent a gallon on 500,000 gallons sold to 60 retail outlets.

Officials said they did not want to label the filling stations as "violators" because in every case they had lowered their price.

The stations found to be overcharging were located in all parts of the United States, but were concentrated in the Southeast and Southwest. Gasoline supplies have been especially tight in the Southeast.

AEC Money Bill Sent Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House completed congressional action Monday on a $2.43 billion Atomic Energy Commission budget authorization bill and sent it to President Nixon.

The measure, covering the year starting July 1, passed 398-4, with Reps. Bella S. Abzug, D-N.Y.; John Conyers, Jr., D-Mich.; Elizabeth Holtzman, D-N.Y., and Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., in dissent. The Senate passed it on Friday, 74-2, with Sens. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., in opposition.

House passage came after rejection of two amendments by Rep. Abzug, one calling for the President to immediately suspend underground nuclear tests and to initiate a new permanent test ban treaty, and the other to prevent Columbia University from fueling and operating its nuclear reactor located on the morningside heights campus in New York City. The first failed 82-12, the second lost on voice vote.

Lincoln Man Fined $300 For Auto Homicides

A 73-year-old Lincoln man has been found guilty and fined $150 on each of two misdemeanor counts of motor vehicle homicide in connection with a Jan. 11 accident at 27th and Old Cheney Rd. which claimed three lives.

Lancaster County Judge Ralph Slocum, after a trial, found Leonard Hill, of 1943 Pawnee, guilty of the two counts of motor vehicle homicide in connection with the deaths of Charles L. Dort and Clara L. Anderson.

Hill, who had pleaded innocent March 6, was specifically charged with entering a highway without yielding the lawful right-of-way.

A third person, Mrs. G. E. Doerck, died several weeks later in a Lincoln Hospital. She and the other two victims of the crash were passengers in the Hill vehicle when it collided with a car driven by Edward Brehms.

Israeli Defense Up

Haifa, Israel (AP) — The government's defense establishment has increased production 500 per cent since 1966 in its effort to make the Jewish state self-sufficient militarily, the Defense Ministry reported.

Adult Book Store's 'Business Booming'

Only time will tell if Lincoln's relatively small "adult book stores" will dry up for good because of the recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling which gives local communities the authority to judge what is obscene.

The Adult Book and Cinema Shop at 11th and N is still open and, according to its new manager, Jim Wolfe, "Business is better than ever."

He said, "People are making a last-minute rush," possibly in anticipation of an impending crackdown on pronography.

The other Adult Book and Cinema Shop, 27th and Holdrege, is closed and apparently has been since last week. Nearby residents said they saw movie arcade machines and other materials being removed recently from the temporary building. It is not known is that shop intends to reopen.

At the downtown store, Wolfe said he doesn't know enough about the local situation to comment much on the future of Lincoln's sole operating "adult" shop, since he just came here and took over Monday.

"It's hard to say at this point," he said. "It all depends on the local officials, what they've got up their sleeve."

The court decision, besides removing the national standard for defining obscenity, also eliminated the "utterly without redeeming social value" standard.

Wolfe didn't act surprised at the ruling. "The court knows they can't come out with anything liberal," he said, especailly since "the public isn't too open to liberation at this point."

Japanese Protest

Tokyo (AP) — More than 12,000 fishermen and fishmongers Monday staged rallies and protests in 10 Japanese states claiming they are unable to catch and sell fish because of contamination by mercury and chemicals.

Stock Prices Slump

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market took a steady downhill ride Monday in light trading as the resumption of Senate hearings apparently rekindled Wall Street's worries over Watergate.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slumped 10.69 to 869.13, its lowest close since mid-December 1971. The slide more than wiped out the average's gain Friday which followed the news of loosened restrictions on increases in corporate dividends.

Declining issues overwhelmed those advancing 1,075 to 307 on the New York Stock Exchange in light turnover of 11.67 million shares.

Some analysts said the Watergate hearings testimony of John W. Dean III, the ousted White House counsel, appeared to be dominating the market. Other observers, however, cited persistent economic worries as well.

UAL, Inc., down ¼ at 16⅜, was the Big Board's most-active stock by a wide margin. Trading in the issue included blocks of 564,900 shares at 16¼ on the NYSE and 102,000 shares at the same price on the Midwest Stock Exchange.

McDonald's Corp. dipped 2⅜ to 53⅞, and Ponderosa Systems slid 2¾ to 33¼. Analysts said some selling pressure on stocks of food-related concerns appeared to have stemmed from concern about a possible profit squeeze on them during the present price freeze. The freeze exempts raw agricultural products but not processed or prepared foods.

On the American Stock Exchange, Sambo's Restaurants followed a similar pattern, sinking 1⅛ to 15¼.

The Amex's price-change index fell .14 to 22.20. The exchange's volume leader was National Kinney bcorp., down ½ at 4½.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks finished at 53.79, down 0.77.

The so-called "glamour" stocks with high price-earnings ratios—including McDonald's— seemed to be bearing a large share of the downward pressure. IBM was down 8 at 308¾; Walt Disney skidded 5⅛ to 71½; Avon Products was off 2¼ at 128¼, and Xerox slipped 2 to 150¾.

The NASDAQ composite index for the Over-the-Counter market dropped 1.56 to 99.43.

Local Solons Blast Gov. Exon's Vetoes

BY JAMES PRATT
Star Staff Writer

State senators from Lancaster County Monday night criticized Gov. J. James Exon's vetoes of social welfare legislation passed during the last legislative session.

Speaking to Nebraska Welfare Association Chapter V, Sens. Wallace Barnett, Shirley Marsh, Harold Simpson and Roland Luedtke specifically condemned the vetoes of a penal reform plan and aid to dependent children legislation.

Luedtke said, "I think (Exon) has wrecked penal reform for at least a year."

But he said the Legislature would again consider penal reform legislation and next year hopes to pass it over a veto if necessary.

Simpson said the penal plan is a welfare matter because by taking men convicted of crimes from their families and imprisoning them the state creates a welfare problem.

The family often must go on welfare to survive and the convicted man has strikes against him when he eventually is released.

The most important part of penal reform, according to Simpson is the creation of an adult diagnostic and evaluation center — a place to decide whether an individual should be placed in an institution or in some less restricted custody or remain in the community under some form of probation.

Barnett said the Lancaster senators tried to pass penal reform legislation and state aid to education for the people, but they couldn't override Exon's vetoes.

"I still believe we were on the right side," he remarked, though various social welfare bills were vetoed or defeated in the Legislature. He called it at times a very frustrating session.

Sen. Marsh said the Legislature let Nebraskans down by not passing what she called "a needed increase in ADC payments." She said she was rather shocked and disappointed at the voting pattern of the unicameral on this issue.

Another measure that was not passed was LB433, a bill providing aid to unborn children, she said. Sen. Marsh said some legislators were more concerned that a woman bear the child than for seeing that the unborn child is given proper health care.

Some of the senators got in digs at Exon's appointment of Dr. Jack Anderson to be director of the Department of Public Institutions.

Barnett said Exon and Dr. Anderson let the legislature and the people down by agreeing to appoint another individual to be medical services director, but now it appears Anderson will become director.

Catholic Ed Board Post To Soukup

Soukup replaces Dr. Roy Loudon who has served as president for the past four years.

Other officers named were Thomas Johnson, vice president; and Don Weitzel, secretary. Rev. Ivan Vapp was elected executive secretary.

New board members installed Monday night are Richard Ruby, Tom Creal and Msgr. Clarence Crowley. They replace Dr. Loudon, Tom Johnson and Msgr. Mitchell Kaczmarek whose terms on the board expired.

Johnson was renamed to the board Monday to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Ed Cantwell.

Channel 13 In Trouble Once More

That old Number 13 is in trouble again, this time to the detriment of educational television viewers in western Nebraska.

The tower that transmits ETV signals at Channel 13 near Alliance was hit by lightning in the spring, knocking out broadcast capabilities for several days.

That problem was repaired and western Nebraska viewers were back at their sets for a time.

But then the tower was hit by lightning again.

Although that damage has been partially repaired, the lightning bolt did cause enough of a problem to prohibit full power transmission for several days.

Complete repairs will await arrival of custom-made parts, which then will have to installed some 1,400 feet high on the tower.

The ETV Commission was told Monday repairs will cost $8,000 to $10,000.

Damage High In Home Blaze

Keller said the fire started when a cigarette fell from an ashtray onto the bed.

The fire was first noticed about 11:00 a.m. by Bill Hall, of Dunedee, Fla., a houseguest of the Havlicеks, who poured water on the mattress and believed the fire to be out.

The fire apparently reignited and smoke was seen coming from the house shortly after 2:00 p.m.

Keller said the blaze was contained to the bedroom.

Police Arrest Ex-Third Citian

SALIDA, Colo (AP) — Donald Jackie Roszynialski, 36, has been arrested in Davenport, Wash., on a charge of burglary of the First National Bank of Salida June 15, Salida Police Chief Harry Cable reported Monday.

Cable said Roszynialski, whose last known address was Grand Island, Neb., was arrested during the weekend in connection with a burglary at Davenport.

The Salida bank was entered through the roof while the bank was being remodeled. A small amount of cash was taken and desks rifled. The bank vault was not touched, police said.

Cable said several items taken from the bank were allegedly found in Roszynialski's possession.

Nebraska Man Declared Dead

Washington (UPI) — The Defense Department announced Monday that four servicemen previously listed as missing in Indochina have now been declared dead as a result of hostile action. There remain 1,257 men listed as missing.

Under existing laws, the interest on said bonds in the hands of the holders thereof will be exempt from Federal Income Tax and will not be includable in computing Nebraska State Income Tax. The proceeds of the bonds will be used for the purpose of providing a portion of the funds for constructing a waterworks system for the District and will be paid solely from the income, proceeds, revenues and funds of the District derived from or held in connection with its waterworks system.

A good faith deposit by cashier's check or certified check in the amount of 2 per cent of total par value of bonds shall accompany each bid, and in case a purchaser whose bid is accepted shall fail to carry out his contract of puchase, the deposit shall be forfeited to the District. PROFIT EROSION $
BEGINS WITH WORK FORCE FATIGUE

Fatigue-caused losses of only 3 minutes per employee, based on the minimum wage scale, can cost $182 a year.
Only 30 minutes lost a week from rejects, costs $45.50 per employee, not taking into account wasted materials.
If you employ only 10 people, the loss can be considerable; if you have 1,000, it can be staggering. Large or small; few businesses can afford profit erosion like this. More and more now subscribe to MUZAK service. Independent studies show that MUZAK increases employee alertness and vigilance.
They found it flows in cyclic curves. By studying this curve and the employee moods underlying it, MUZAK specialists were able to discover, through exacting tests, just which kind of music would best stimulate the employee at the times of day when efficiency is lowest.
The MUZAK service is different from mere background music. Far different. For years, scientist studied the ebb and flow of employee efficiency.
Thus, music by MUZAK is psychologically selected, recorded and programmed to vary throughout the day and fit the employee efficiency curve.

Seen Lakepoint yet?

Right. Good location too—only minutes from downtown and campus.

There it is-just off your starboard wing.

Great Place! — for people. Hey, isn't that Gertrude down there circling the dock?

Let's drop in and have a look.

I think I'll perch on the fourth story penthouse for a second.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 6-26
